NU victories can't save meet

From Staff Reports

The Nebraska women's swimming and diving team kicked off its 1997-98 season the same way the Cornhuskers finished last season - defeating Texas.

NU, which defeated Texas last season 51-49 to win the Inaugural Big 12 Relay Meet in St. Louis, Mo., defeated the Longhorns Friday night 55-54 in the Big 12 Relay Meet held at the Bob Devaney Sports Center pool.

The Husker men's swimming and diving team finished fourth with 32 points while defending meet champion Texas won seven of 11 events to win the meet. Iowa State finished second while Texas A&M finished third.

On Saturday both teams competed in the Big 12 Invitational, a non-scoring event at the BDSC pool.

On Friday, however, the NU women won five of the 11 contested relays, including the 300-yard butterfly, 200-yard medley relay, 400-yard medley relay, and the 200-yard freestyle relay.

The NU men's team's only victorious relay was on the diving board as junior All-American Danny Bergman and sophomore Bert Locklin scored a 361.50, compared to second place Texas, which scored a 327.40.

Nebraska sophomore all-American Adam Pine led off the 300-yard butterfly relay in a pool record time of 47.76 seconds as the Huskers finished third in the event.

Pine, who was last season's NCAA runner-up in the 100-yard butterfly, won the event on Saturday in a time of 48.20 seconds, while Texas' Nate Dusing finished second at 49.14.

Bergman swept the 1- and 3-meter diving competitions, scoring 332.05 and 326.05, respectively. His scores qualify him for the NCAA Zone competition in March.

Junior Josh Mathis won the Huskers only other event in 200-yard freestyle.

Sophomores Beth Karaica, Lenka Manhalova, Anne Windsor and freshman Amanda Zins each recorded wins for the Husker women on Saturday. Karaica won the 50-yard freestyle, Manhalova won the 200-yard breaststroke, Windsor won the 100-yard butterfly and Zins in her first diving competition won the 1-meter springboard and finished fourth in the 3-meter competition.

Nebraska will play host to the Pumpkin Classic Wednesday-Friday, and select members of the team will compete in the U.S. National Team Invitational Wednesday-Friday.
