

Sessions help UNL's Asians obtain jobs

From Staff Reports

Asian students facing financial difficulties can attend sessions sponsored by the Office of International Affairs during the next week to help them find jobs.

Association of Students of the University of Nebraska Senator Kara Slaughter said Asian students could receive assistance completing off-campus work permits at the sessions.

The University of Nebraska-Lincoln will pay the $70 fee required to submit the form, and Judy Wendorff, international affairs student adviser, will be available to answer questions.

Slaughter said students from Japan, Taiwan, Malaysia, Indonesia, Korea, the Philippines and Thailand were eligible to receive assistance at the workshops, which will be held today at 4 p.m. and Tuesday at 7 p.m. in the Office of International Affairs.

Job fair creates contacts for career chasers

The Nebraska Union and the Wick Alumni Center were booming with activity Thursday as students and alumni wove their way through tables, displays and literature on hand.

More than 75 companies from Nebraska and across the nation took part in the 1998 Engineering and Technology Career Fair to find interns and full-time employees.

Cliff Pemble, Software Engineering Manager for Garmin International, said he was seeking engineers for the company's design department.

"We like to be connected with the colleges and universities," Pemble said. "We are looking for someone who has a desire to live and work in the Midwest and is interested in products and product development."

Brad Blum, a UNL graduate, represented Hormel Foods. Blum is in the Industrial Engineering Department and said the company wanted to recruit for a variety of positions.

Justin Speichinger, a sophomore mechanical engineering major, said he hopes to find a summer internship through the career fair and learn about the companies.

Joyce Wade, representative for IBM, said the company always gets a good response from UNL students.

"We were also here in the fall," Wade said. "Ten students have accepted full-time employment with us."

IBM has received a number of interns from UNL, she said. The business attracts students by informing them of the opportunities available at IBM, which recruits for its offices across the country.

"It is a very successful and profitable day for us."

Man arrested for solicitation

A Columbus, Miss., man reported that his wallet was stolen by the escort service he had called in search of prostitutes.

Henry Poole, 57, called Confidentially Yours in Lincoln looking for sex early Thursday morning. The escort service explained that it does not provide sex, but Poole still made an appointment, Lincoln Police Sgt. Ann Heermann said.

When two women arrived at the Imperial Inn, where Poole was staying, he propositioned them for sex.

The women refused, collected a $20 fee for canceling the appointment and left.

Later Poole realized his wallet was missing and called police. After relating his story to the authorities, Poole was arrested for soliciting sex.

Teen arrested for threats

A Lincoln teen-ager was arrested for making threats to kill someone who had borrowed her compact disc player.

The girl tried Wednesday to reclaim a portable CD player she had lent to an acquaintance by waving a knife in his face.

After the girl picked up the CD player from the his car, the man and his friend began making derogatory comments toward her, Heermann said.

The girl's mother then began to pound on the car and yell at the borrower.

Then the girl produced a folding knife. She reached inside the car, slashed the knife around and threatened to kill them all.

Both mother and daughter were cited for making terroristic threats, and the daughter was arrested.
