

Racial threats target students

the Daily Nebraskan Tuesday night. Because the incidents are still under investigation, Williams said he could not comment on specific details of the case. Williams did say Chancellor James Moeser is aware of the situation and is taking an active part in the investigation. Parker, who is black, said the note he received under his door was more harassment than a threat. "It really creates a hostile work environment," he said. As far as he knows, Parker said, he did not do anything to prompt anyone to give him the note. He believes it was a random act. Parker would not reveal the contents of the note citing the pending police investigation. Parker said the note is the first of its nature he has received. "It makes one wonder why anyone should have to endure such a situation."

Koziol boy upgraded

One of the boys involved in an April 15 car accident that claimed the lives of his mother and two of his brothers was listed in good condition at Lincoln General Hospital on Tuesday. Brian Koziol, 6, was upgraded Monday from serious to fair condition and was moved out of intensive care, hospital officials said. Tuesday morning he was listed in good condition. Koziol's mother, Le Ann, 39, and older brother Kevin, 8, died the night of the accident. The youngest Koziol boy, Aaron, 4, died April 21 at Lincoln General Hospital, where he had been in critical condition since the accident. The oldest of the four boys, Matt, 10, was treated for minor injuries and released on the night of the accident. Ray Koziol, the boys' father and the Nebraska East Union operations manager, was at work when the accident happened. A memorial fund has been established for the Koziol family at Havelock Bank, and donations also are being accepted at bowling centers citywide. Ray Koziol had been involved with the University of Nebraska-Lincoln bowling team and ran the East Campus lanes. He was an avid bowler at lanes around Lincoln.
