God Lives Underwater "Life in the So-Called Space Age"

1500 Records (Polygram) Grade: B

The band God Lives Underwater is a tesseract, wrapped around a complex, wrapped around an enigma.

On one hand, they are an up-tothe-minute, techno-inspired rock band, complete with mega-mixed synthesizers, odd rhythms, strange harmonies and the occasional hip-hop ripoff. But, on the other hand, they write some terrific melodies, which are not always enhanced by the unusual deadpan delivery employed by GLU's lead singer (sorry, they don't differentiate who does what on their album).

The best song on this album is called "Happy?". It speaks to those of us who are unhappy with our personal lives. This is one song where the lyrics and the music actually match rather than conflict. The lyrics state "I hope you're happy ... at least one of us is.

Maybe someday you'll see ... I need metaphor come vividly alive.

Another decent song is "Rearrange." This song succeeds in creating a hypnotic, surreal mood in which anything can happen — and usually does. The lyrics include "It all depends on how your point of view can change ... round and round, rearrange." This is a good, danceable track suitable for "partying" music.

GLU suffers from some artistic, conceptually based problems, characterized by uneven, uninflected vocal delivery on most of their songs. But the music is first-rate, adept at creating a wide variety of stoned-out, spacedout moods, without once being boring.

If you like your music without too much lyrical or emotional demands, and are heavily into electronica, sampling and synthesizers, this is the album for you.

This is interesting, pleasant music, without too many technical demands. A little bland and unemotional for my taste, but it might just be yours, heading into finals week.

— Barb Churchill
