

Robak to join NU system

Also, as vice president for external affairs, Robak will be one of the two closest advisers to NU President Dennis Smith. She will work with Smith, the chancellors of all four NU campuses and other senior administrators to develop programs, policies and procedures.

"External affairs is a very broad arena which determines the way the university interacts with the external environment," Smith said.

Robak also will lead the university's efforts to build and strengthen relationships with external constituencies. These include the Chamber of Commerce, the Nebraska Legislature and the governor's office.

She will have overall responsibility for state, federal and public relations and communications for NU. As corporation secretary, Robak will be the principal staff liaison to the regents.

"Those kind of activities are what she has been doing on a regular basis," Smith said.

Robak said she had two other job offers pending when she was asked by Smith to take the job at the university. But, she said, she couldn't resist the challenges of working in a policy-making and educational environment and the opportunity to work at the university she attended.

Smith cited Robak's background as being beneficial to her new job. She received a bachelor's degree from UNL and a law degree from the NU College of Law.

She taught for four years in the Lincoln Public Schools and was a partner in a Lincoln law firm.

She became Gov. Nelson's legal counsel in 1991 and later become his chief of staff before being elected lieutenant governor in 1993.

Robak will begin her university job the first week of January, after a new lieutenant governor is sworn into office.

Donal Burns, associate executive vice president for external affairs, will be the interim corporation secretary from July 13 until Jan. 6, 1999. Burns will receive a monthly stipend for additional responsibilities during this period.

Smith has said he does not plan to appoint an interim vice president for external affairs. Instead, Ron Withem and Troutman will assume additional responsibilities during the interval.

Withem has been named associate vice president for external affairs and will continue his work as the director of governmental relations. Troutman was named assistant vice president for external affairs.
