

The last challenge of a socially conscious society?

Depression strikes millions— indiscriminately. Depression is simply a suppression of brain activity that makes life unbearable. And even though depression is readily treatable, only 1 in 5 ever seeks treatment. Why do so many just drag themselves along or eventually seek relief through suicide? First, there's the lack of awareness of depression— as an illness and as the threat that it is to each and every one of us. Second, there's the unwarranted negative stigma attached to it. You know, the 'mental' thing. It's time to collectively face depression. To know it's an illness, not a weakness. And it's a challenge that's long overdue. It's taken too many of us already.

Huskers ready for UT, A&M

BY SHANNON HEFFELFINGER
Senior staff writer

For the first time in two weeks, the Nebraska volleyball team is preparing to play a match at home. The Cornhuskers are undefeated and ranked third in the nation. Their coach could pick up his 700th career win this weekend.

The Huskers have several reasons to smile in practice this week. And the biggest reason doesn't even arrive in Lincoln until Friday.

NU will play host to No. 13 Texas and No. 15 Texas A&M this weekend. Nebraska Coach Terry Pettit said the Texas teams offer NU its best competition since Sept. 4 when it battled No. 7 Stanford.

"What I saw in the players yesterday was something beyond being just happy to be home," Pettit said.

"The knowledge that we're playing great competition this weekend has them very excited."

As Nebraska prepares for the challenging weekend, several Huskers are playing as well as they have all season.

Senior middle blocker Megan Korver currently leads the country in hitting percentage at .470. Against Iowa State Sept. 25, Korver became only the 10th player in Division I history to hit 1,000 (10 kills, 10 attacks) in a match.

NU setter Fiona Nepo broke the school career assist record two weeks ago.

Pettit said the great individual performances have lead to consistent team play.

The Huskers are second in the nation with a .348 team hitting percentage. Nebraska is also the second-best blocking team in the country with four blocks per game.

"It's a sign of maturity, and it's a sign that Fiona just will not let teams run away from us," Pettit said.

"It's also a sign of our depth. We are able to substitute to our strengths. People know that other players can come off the bench if we need it."

After consistently playing 13 players the first few weeks of the season, Pettit has settled on a nine-player rotation: Jaime Krondak, Angie Oxley and Mandy Monson on the left side; Korver, Tonia Tauke and freshman Jenny Kropp in the middle; Nepo at the setter spot and Nancy Meendering on the right side.

Pettit said the Huskers are as healthy as they've been all season — and at just the right time.

"Texas is one of about six teams in the country that has the physical talent to compete for the national championship," Pettit said. "And A&M is the surprise team of the conference. We all thought they might not be as good as they have been in the past, but this looks like their best team in several years. The team is excited."

Jackson progresses at linebacker

BY BRANDON SCHULTE

The quarterback looks up at the sky from his back, trying to get up, wishing the pain would go away. He's also wondering what was the name of the truck that just hit him

That's a scene that will be seen at the University of Nebraska-Lincoln junior from

Jackson likes to see. "It feels great to see the quarterback knocked out, struggling to get up," Jackson said. "Having just knocked out a couple of snot balls."

Jackson, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln junior from Gainesville, Texas, is making a name for himself in opposing offenses' backfields this season while becoming a solid member of the NU linebacking corps.

As a back-up to Eric Johnson, Jackson provides quality depth at a position where he and Johnson are close to being interchangeable, Linebacker Coach Craig Bohl said.

"(Jackson) can play during the course of the game and when the game is on the line," Bohl said. "He's developed into a guy we feel can come in and play in any situation."

Taking advantage of his increased playing time this season, Jackson has flourished, recording 10 tackles, two sacks for 19 yards in losses and four quarterback hurries.

Jackson has come on since the spring game this past season. One player who Jackson feels has contributed to his success this season has been senior captain Jay Foreman.

"Foreman has helped me out a lot," Jackson said. "I go to him when I need advice. He helps me prepare mentally."

Foreman describes Jackson as having a tremendous amount of speed, creating exciting, big plays all over the field.

Bohl agrees with Foreman's assessment, citing Jackson's excellent strength, explosiveness and quickness that leads to his spirited play.

Though Jackson creates terror on the field, off the field he's easygoing. He describes himself as unique with a great personality, and he has friends of all kinds.

The psychology major serves as vice president of the Student Athlete Advisory Board. He is a 1998 Brook Berringer Citizenship Team member and an active volunteer in the Husker Outreach Program.

There has never been much doubt about his athleticism, either. Foreman has never questioned Jackson's physical ability, and with the mental part of his game coming around he can only get better.

"He's going to start making more big plays when he gets more confident," Foreman said. "It's only a matter of time before he starts to play real well. It's his time to play real well now."
