

Sheldon proves reputation through grant

By SARAH BAKER
Senior staff writer

If the Sheldon Memorial Art Gallery hasn't proven its reputation with the exhibits, films and sculpture it draws from around the country, it has certainly proven it now.

On Thursday, the Sheldon received a $100,222 grant from the Institute of Museum and Library Services.

The Sheldon, located at 12th and R streets on the University of Nebraska-Lincoln campus, is among fewer than 200 museums to receive this grant, which had more than 900 applicants nationwide.

The money, which will be awarded in five payments over two fiscal years, is going to be used in support of existing programs at the Sheldon, according to Director George Neubert.

"This kind of direct support to the operating program of the gallery is a real shot in the arm, because we do not get the program support from the university," Neubert said.

"Equally important, it is a recognition of the quality in the service the Sheldon provides to the university and the community."

The money is going to be used to supplement exhibitions, publications, research and, most importantly, a new handbook describing the university's sculpture collection on campus.

The new booklet will give people a chance to learn about the history of the sculptures, as well as information about the artists and time periods in which they were crafted.

Neubert said the handbook most likely will be printed by the University Press and will be sold in the campus bookstores as well as appearing in all the state libraries.

"About 90 percent of the campus sculptures are officially a part of the Sheldon's permanent collection," he said.

The money also will be used to enhance the museum's Web site by making it more interactive. The grant also is going to be directed toward marketing the gallery to students.

Appropriately enough, the grant coincides with National Arts and Humanities Month.

The Sheldon has numerous events planned throughout the month, including speakers coordinating with planned exhibits and several community outreach activities.

"We are going to celebrate," Neubert said about the employees of the Sheldon. "This is really a cream-of-the-crop recognition."

Neubert said they wouldn't be spending any of the federal dough on a big party, though.

That money is for everyone to enjoy.
