To Campus Atheists And Agnostics

Dear Agnostics:
 Only ignorance can question- knowledge is without question. So if you question everything, then you know nothing. At least with this stance you are trying to recognize knowledge and you have already realized that "belief" is a very poor way to approach knowledge. Eventually, with enough effort, you will realize that "reason" is also inadequate to the task. I hope you all will make this phase of self denial short. One day you will look yourself straight in the face and say, "I have always already known this, I just kept forgetting it." What you will be seeing is that you yourself are the Divine. Good luck on your journeys to this knowledge, to this remembering.
 Dear Atheists:
 Your belief that there is no God is no stronger than the volcano worshipper's belief that the volcano is God. You are caught in the standard performative contradiction, by denying your "nonbelief" is just a form of "belief." You operate with the same level of understanding as do the volcano worshippers, Christians, Muslims, etc. I'm surprised you can be found in the same fold as the agnostics. Your pretense of a higher awareness belies your egocentric motives. Eventually the agnostics will see through your facade.
