The DN and you

Paper offers plenty of advantages for incoming students

SAMUEL MCKEWON is a senior news-editorial major and the Daily Nebraskan summer editor.

For many of you, this is your first experience with the Daily Nebraskan. Over the next years of your life, you'll see it often, I presume, and even occasionally read it.

It is one of the best college newspapers in America, and some years, it's probably the best. We may be classified a third-tier school, but this publication doesn't reflect that in the least.

I've never been one to advertise, but the Daily Nebraskan, or the DN as many call it, serves a valuable and necessary function on this campus. It is stands outside of professional newspapers and reports specifically on campus related events and of course, Nebraska sports.

But many people who don't go to college here still read us, because we serve a valuable function of recording the city and state's activities, as well. If you're interested in the legislature, it's here. Our Arts & Entertainment section is more in tune than most professional papers as to what you're looking for music and a good time.

Beyond those advantages, the DN offers a great many things. Among them:

A great crossword puzzle. Many people, instead of reading the paper, just do the crossword puzzle. Now you too can challenge Grandma to battle of phonic wit next time you see her. She will be impressed.

A classified ads section, with Greek post-it boards included! Oh yes, you will get used to these quickly. Often times, fraternities and sororities will post messages that seem fit for a seventh grade class. An example is provided:

Sorority No. 1 says: Hey guys, we had a great time canoodling and eating baked fish with you at your lodge!

Welcome.

The Division of University Housing would like to welcome all new students and congratulate you on your choice to attend the University of Nebraska-Lincoln. We would especially like to welcome those of you who have made the smart choice to stay on campus.

University Housing provides you with an ideal environment in which to begin your college experience and offers benefits you can't find anywhere else. The high-speed internet connections are some of the best you'll find -- no more dialing, no more waiting. And with the addition of many new Freshmen Learning Communities, it's now even easier for you to meet other students with similar interests and goals.

We're sure you'll find your experience in the residence halls to be a fun and rewarding one. We look forward to seeing you in the fall.
