

Volunteer Services looks for help from UNL students

From Staff Reports

Volunteer Services is asking for something back from students — time.

"There are a lot of volunteer opportunities, and we're desperately looking for people," said Diane Podolske, assistant director of Volunteer Services.

Volunteer Services acts as a liaison between the organization and student, matching the student with a volunteer opportunity. Volunteer Services currently has organizations that need students, but no students to volunteer.

When students leave for summer break, Podolske said, they take with them a resource which many organizations in the Lincoln community depend on.

"Organizations saw all of our students at UNL and thought that a great resource," she said.

Now, Volunteer Services has the challenge of finding summer volunteers from UNL to fill the needs of the service organizations, she said. The service is searching for students, faculty and staff that have some time to give.

"There is a myriad of volunteer opportunities," said Stacey Duncan, who works with Volunteer Services.
