UNL celebrates Chinese fest
The University of Nebraska Malaysian Student Association is selling mooncakes to University of Nebraska-Lincoln students today and Wednesday in the Nebraska Union as part of the annual Mooncake Festival. The festival, which is a Chinese tradition, stems from an uprising in the 14th century during Mongolian rule in China, 1280-1368. Those wanting to overthrow the government ordered the making of special cakes. Inside the cakes, they included a piece of paper with an outline of the attack. The rebels were successful. Since the overthrow, Chinese in countries such as China and Malaysia have celebrated the Mooncake Festival on Aug. 15. The festival is also called the Mid-Autumn Festival. Cherh Kuan Wong, NUMSA president, said the group decided to share the festival with UNL, so it held its event in September. NUMSA is selling seven types of mooncakes. Prices range from $3.50 to $4.50. The cakes were imported from Chinatown in Chicago and were made in Hong Kong. Wong said cities such as San Francisco have large celebrations for the festival.

Boon Gee Goh, NUMSA member and junior finance major, said the group wanted to educate campus about the festival and raise money for the group, allowing the group to hold other events.

Sally Ride to speak at SAC
Sally Ride, the first woman in space, will be speaking Wednesday at 10:30 a.m. at the Strategic Air Command Museum near Ashland. Ride, who was an astronaut on the Challenger's 1983 mission, will give a presentation to 225 middle school students called Leadership and America's Future in Space. Children will have a chance to ask Ride questions after the presentation. Ride has accumulated more than 343 hours in space and was preparing for her third mission when the Challenger exploded in 1986. After her space career, Ride became an assistant to the NASA administrator for long-range planning. She created NASA's Office of Exploration and produced a report on the future of the space program. After that, Ride became director of the California Space Institute and professor of physics at the University of California in San Diego. The SAC museum is located off Interstate 80 on Exit 426 near Ashland.

Fraternity spreads awareness
Sigma Nu Fraternity wants to educate students this week about alcohol and its effects. Fraternity members are handing out information on a new topic every day at a booth in the Nebraska Union. Monday the group handed out information on drinking and driving. Other topics cover sex under the influence of alcohol, alcohol addiction and high-risk drinking. The fraternity is also publishing facts about alcohol in the Daily Nebraskan throughout the week. Sigma Nu President Bill Dixon said this was the first year the fraternity has held an alcohol awareness week. Dixon said he hopes the fraternity can do more with the week next year, adding speakers and other activities.

Lincoln man robbed Monday
Two men attacked a 34-year-old Lincoln man on his way to work Monday morning, Capt. David Beggs said. The attackers hit him twice in the head and took a bag the man had, Beggs said. He said two men approached the 34-year-old at about 7 a.m. and asked him what was in his bag. After a brief conversation, the man tried to walk away but was hit in the head, Beggs said, with what the victim thought was a pistol.

After fighting briefly with one man, the 34-year-old was hit in the head again, police said. Police said the two attackers than took his bag and fled. The 34-year-old was still able to follow his attackers to a home, which was later searched by police who recovered the victim's bag. The bag contained several shirts, a watch and cologne, Beggs said.

Five students cited for MIP
Six people were cited for alcohol offenses in Smith Residence Hall early Saturday morning after housing officials reported the party. A community service officer spotted several cans of beer in an open refrigerator when he approached the offenders in the seventh floor room at 1:16 a.m., University Police Sgt. Mylo Bushing said. University Police arrived and searched the room, Bushing said, citing three freshman students and two non-students with minor in possession. A 34-year-old woman in the room, Penny Bowers of Omaha, also was cited with procuring alcohol for minors.

Bushing said. The student blew a .157 blood alcohol content after arriving at detox. Because the student was 18, she stayed in detox until no alcohol registered in her blood. The student's parents were also contacted in accordance with Nebraska law.

Man caught urinating near University Terrace
A Valley man contacted by University Police for urinating in public Saturday evening failed to stop peeing after zipping his pants up, Bushing said. A bike patrol officer saw Anthony Peterson, 26, urinating near 420 University Terrace at about 7:30 p.m., Bushing said. While speaking with the officer, Peterson tried to pull his pants up and close the zipper before he actually finished urinating, Bushing said. He was cited for urinating in public.

Student transported to Detox after officer smelled alcohol
A freshman student spent Friday night in Cornhusker Detox after a CSO found her smelling of alcohol. The incident took place outside Neihardt Residence Center at 12:42 a.m. Saturday. The officer asked the student to stand up, which, Bushing said, she was unable to do. The student told the officer she was drunk and had vomited several times,

Two arrested after stealing sides of tent, vinyl chair
University Police spotted two men dragging two sides of a tent and a white vinyl chair over the 10th Street bridge Saturday at 7:37 p.m. The pair apparently removed the walls and took the chair from a tent set near UNL's Memorial Stadium. The walls and chair were valued at $175. Gregory Wellman and Jedediah Fischer, both 22, were arrested for misdemeanor theft.
