

Police arrest man for exposure

Police arrested a 28-year-old Manhattan, Kan., man early Sunday morning after a UNL student reported seeing him masturbating in a driveway, University Police Sgt. Mylo Bushing said.

Jeffery Fowlar, who is not a Kansas State University student, was arrested for indecent exposure and public indecency.

After spending the night in jail, he paid 10 percent of his $500 bond for both charges and was released Sunday.

A student outside Pi Beta Phi

Sorority, 426 N. 16th St., told police she saw a man crouched between two cars in a nearby driveway masturbating, Bushing said.

The man said "baby, baby" to the student, then followed her to the back door of the sorority house, Bushing said.

A UNL police officer arriving on foot saw the man get into a red car and drive south on 16th Street. Police stopped him at the intersection of 19th and O streets, Bushing said.

Fowlar was linked to an incident Friday night when students near Alpha Phi Sorority, 1531 S St., saw a man masturbating in a nearby parking lot, Lincoln Police Ofc. Katherine Finnell said. The students approached and confronted the man who fled from the scene, Finnell said.

Lincoln police responded to the call but were unable to locate the man, Finnell said.

Bushing said witnesses identified Fowlar as the same man seen masturbating Friday night.

Police in Riley County, Kan., which includes Manhattan, would not say whether Fowlar had committed similar crimes in the past. Police at Kansas State University in Manhattan said they did not know the man.

Fowlar is scheduled to appear in court Dec. 8 for the indecent exposure charge and Dec. 9 for the public indecency charge.

Historian recounts visit to WWII sites

1943 and replaced with a farm, affected him more than any other death camp.

"I realized that this was the perfect memorial, precisely because it was not a memorial at all - simply an abandoned slaughter site, so fouled by human evil that even the grass refuses to grow, despite layered tons of rich human fertilizer lying just beneath its surface," Warren said.

Memory, Warren said, resides in the heart. While at Belzac, Warren said he was overwhelmed with memory despite having never been to the site before.

Instead, Warren's memories at that time could have been, drawn from an experience in Vietnam.

While on a special mission in Vietnam in August 1963, Warren said, he experienced a moment that brought him close to evil.

"I killed a child with my own hands," Warren said.

"He was of no danger to us, other than he saw us where we shouldn't have been."

Warren began studying the Holocaust almost 30 years later, but it wasn't until he visited Belzac, in early 1999, that he said he found himself.

"When I began, I went looking for the Holocaust, and I went looking for myself," Warren said. "And I found myself at Belzac."

Drudge upset about Fox decision

■ Show host wanted to air segment showing fetus undergoing surgery, but network said no.

NEW YORK (AP) - Matt Drudge refused to appear on his Fox News Channel program after the network said he could not show a picture of a fetus undergoing surgery.

Fox executives did not want the Internet gossip columnist and broadcaster to use the photo Saturday to support his anti-abortion views.

Drudge, reached by phone this morning in Los Angeles, disputed Fox's account and accused the network of censorship.

"This notion that I was going to misrepresent this as an abortion is junk," Drudge said.

The photograph, printed in the National Enquirer, shows a 21-week-old fetus with a tiny hand reaching out from the womb as it undergoes surgery for spina bifida, a spinal birth defect.

"He was using this photo from the National Enquirer as a jumping-off point to talk about partial-birth abortion," said Fox spokesman Brian Lewis.

"It was a picture of an emergency

"(I) was going to show it and bill it as an operation for spina bifida and just say, 'What does it say about life? Look at this hand coming out.'" operation for spina bifida. We thought it was a blatant misrepresentation. It was a straight editorial decision."

"Partial-birth abortion" is a term used by critics for a type of late-term abortion.

Drudge said he "was going to show it and bill it as an operation for spina bifida and just say, 'What does it say about life? Look at this hand coming out.'"

He added: "If I was going to show a picture of an ostrich egg with a foot popping out, it would be fine."

"It happens to be a picture of a human. People get upset about that."

Drudge has a regular Saturday slot on Fox. He described the show as a "one-man outlook" that combines breaking news and commentary.

Asserting that "the abortion issue is red-hot this election," Drudge added: "I'm not trying to censor what (Fox owner Rupert) Murdoch says; I don't know why he's trying to censor what I say."

Drudge also contended he told Fox in advance about the picture so that permission could be obtained from the Enquirer.

Lewis said Fox expects Drudge to show up for his program Saturday. Drudge said that when he does, he will try again to show the photo.

Asked about his long-term future with Fox, Drudge said: "There are grave creative differences."

On Drudge's Web page Monday was a headline proclaiming, "I WILL NOT BE CENSORED!"
