

Gloomy feel makes 'Affair' predicatable

Game." All of the actors brood quite nicely onscreen, especially Fiennes, who has made a living off such roles.

Moore has a complicated role as a woman trapped between her lover and the promise she made to leave him. She's always been a dazzling facial actor, one that could change the look in her eyes as the scene sees fit. As usual, Moore's performance is one of the film's better compliments.

If only the entire proceeding didn't feel so gloomy - the soundtrack, the lighting, the dour speaking voices - we wouldn't know within minutes of its beginning that "The End of Affair" will end with some sort of tragedy to accompany it. This story is unfurled in a highly intelligent fashion, but it's still predictable.

It makes for a much longer, tougher movie experience in the process. This one hour and 45-minute movie feels at least 30 minutes longer.

So, as well-made as "The End of the Affair" is, it's disappointing. It's worse than when the villain ends up on top in an action movie; this time around, lifelong pain and suffering triumphs.

The End of the Affair

REVIEW

STARS: Ralph Fiennes, Julianne Moore
DIRECTOR: Neil Jordan
RATING: R (Nudity, severe gloominess.)
GRADE: B-
FIVE WORDS: Good, but what a downer.

Floods. Hurricanes. Tornadoes. Rescues at sea. International peacekeeping missions. Whenever there's a need, the National Guard and Reserve responds. But only with the unselfish support of thousands of employers like you.
