Man flees trailer court after being shot in leg

A Lincoln man ran from a trailer court after being shot in the leg on Frida, police said.

Davila Lorenzana, 23, 2525 Cleveland Ave., Apt. 80, told police he ran from his home after being shot in the leg; he thought the suspects continued to shoot as he fled, Lincoln Police Capt. David Beggs said.

Lorenzana was in the trailer with a 17-year-old friend when three or four men entered the trailer, Beggs said.

One of the men pointed a gun at Lorenzana's head. The two struggled, and Lorenzana was shot in the leg and ran from his trailer, Beggs said.

Police did not have suspects as of Sunday.

UNL student and mother have close call when car burns

Minutes before their car was engulfed in flames, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln student and her mother left it to go for help Sunday.

UNL sophomore Katherine Kralik, 20, of Lincoln, was driving east on Interstate 80 with her mother when they heard a noise and pulled off onto 27th Street, State Trooper Mike Tumbelson said.

The two were walking to a service station for help at about 12:30 p.m. when they looked back and saw flames coming from the 1983 Dodge Aries, Tumbelson said.

The Raymond Fire Department responded to the call.

The cause of the fire was unknown, said Tumbelson, who was at the scene. The car was a total loss.

Movies focus of law class

"I think it's a unique perspective having graduate and undergraduate students' thoughts in the same class," Hamilton said.

Michael Gilmour, third-year law student, said he likes having the honors undergraduates in the class.

"It was a little odd at first because, generally, undergraduates don't set foot inside this building," Gilmour said. "... Actually, it's exciting to have new people come into class with a new point of view, because sometimes this college can seem like a jail."

Kayla Dick, a junior English major, said she'd probably never look at another lawyer movie in the same way again. She now can see the differences between what happens to lawyers in film and in real life.

"I think (this class) has confirmed my decision about going to law school," Dick said.

Miss USA crowned in Missouri

BRANSON, Mo. (AP) - The newly crowned Miss USA says she hopes her accomplishment will serve as encouragement for adopted children.

That's because Lynnette Cole is an adoptee herself.

"One good thing about this title is that I can tell them that just because you are adopted does not mean that there is anything wrong - you're very special," the 21-year-old Miss Tennessee said Friday night after being crowned Miss USA 2000 at Branson's Grand Palace.

Cole, a pre-law student at Columbia State Community College, amused the crowd after the pageant by answering some silly questions with a deadpan expression.

Asked why male beauty pageants are not popular, she answered: "Because they don't look good in dresses."

Asked where she was going to store her crown: "On my head."

Cole moves on to compete in the Miss Universe Pageant in Nicosia, Cyprus, on May 12, and becomes the Miss Universe Organization's official spokeswoman for breast and ovarian cancer awareness.

Carson Daly of MTV was the master of ceremonies. Grammy nominees Christina Aguilera, Brian McKnight and Lou Bega performed.
