RHA holds debate

■ Candidates discuss intercampus communication and hall power.

By Katie Muetting

Staff writer

A vice presidential candidate for one of the RHA election groups said in a debate on Monday night she wants to improve relations between city and east campus residence hall students.

Tiffany Quinze, a senior elementary education major, said she would have office hours in the East Campus Union, so executive members would have the opportunity to talk with senators and residents there.

Sponsored by the Residence Hall Association, the presidential and vice presidential debate was held in the Neihardt Blue TV Lounge.

Two election groups, Unite and Vision, are campaigning for executive RHA positions.

Quinze and Presidential Candidate Rebecca Minshull, a junior family sciences major, are running with the Unite group.

Presidential Candidate Jason Ball and Vice Presidential Candidate Rebecca Overgaard are with the Vision group.

Elections will be held Wednesday.

Ball, a senior management information systems major, said Vision would increase the local hall government's power.

Ball said he wants to increase the amount of money each residence hall receives from $5.50 to $6 per student.

This would force outside organizations to ask hall governments for event funding, causing the organizations to advertise for their events closer to the students they want to reach, Ball said.

Quinze said she would implement a "buddy hall system" that would pair a city campus residence hall with an east campus residence hall.

Minshull said these halls could team up for events.

"There are three halls on east campus that don't get involved as they could be with halls on city campus," Minshull said.

Ball said he wants to involve non-senate members in RHA. To accomplish this, he would mail residence hall students information on RHA events they could assist with, such as the semi-formal and Olympics.

Overgaard, a junior advertising major, said RHA would be strengthened with increased involvement in local governments.

"Everyone needs opportunities to be leaders," Overgaard said.

"I see RHA as a stepping stone to getting everyone individually involved in your halls."
