be the No. 1 quarterback.

"If Crouch goes down, Newcombe is the guy," Gill said. "That's the anticipation."

Whether Chrisman and Lindstrom will be needed next fall as much as they have been this spring is yet to be determined. But Chrisman says that doesn't matter because he's living his dream.

"I've always wanted to play big-time football and you can't get bigger than this," Chrisman said. "It's just something I always wanted to do — kind of a dream I guess. I'm still living a dream."

Notes:

Nebraska worked out for just more than two hours Wednesday in its final practice before the Red-White scrimmage on Saturday. No new injuries were reported. The coaching staff will divide up the players into two teams tonight for the spring game.

Solich said he was pleased with the progress his team has made this spring and expects most of the loose ends to be tied up Saturday.

"It's been a good spring," Solich said. "I like the attitude of the team. I like the way they went about the spring."

"It hasn't been easy for them — practices have been long and demanding — but I think they responded well."

in better shape in the fall after going through conditioning.

The defense also came on strong, recording 10 tackles for losses and five sacks. Redshirt freshman Reed Boyd and true freshman Phillip Geiggar led the Longhorns with seven tackles apiece.

"This has been the best spring we've had since I've been here."

Are universities becoming more like for-profit companies, spinning businesses and earning royalties off faculty inventions? Are increased funding ties between universities and corporations compromising university research? Or is private funding the key to continued research success and achievement?

Jennifer Washburn, author of The Kept University (The Atlantic Monthly, March 2000), and Howard Bremer, patent attorney and former president of the Association of University Technology Managers, debate the issue.
