events. It has put in for a bid to run the NCAA Championships itself.

Time of playing: The team plays on Wednesday, Friday and Saturday nights. The best you'll get is usually general admission. But it's worth it.

Concessions: A full assortment and relatively cheap.

Souvenir crap: Plenty of it.

Other notables: Trophy case full of awards, T-shirts contests. Husker drum line displays for the big mat. at are something to see.

Soccer: Nebraska was one goal away from the College Cup last season, the women's soccer equivalent to the Final Four. NU expects to be among the top-five teams in the nation this season despite graduating a good portion of a strong defense.

In the spring, NU tied defending national champion

North Carolina.

Time of playing: The Huskers play at Abbott Sports Complex, just north of 70th Street and Cornhusker Highway. It's a drive — probably quicker to go the Interstate. Look for the giant windmills. Friday nights, while it's warm, and Sunday afternoons are typical playing times.

Concessions: Quality.

Other notables: Occasional whiff of the dog food plant during a windy day; stunning sunsets; if your car breaks down, there's a body shop across the street.

Basketball: It was a lean year for the men's team. With the hiring of Barry Collier, things are looking up slightly. But the atmosphere of the Bob Devaney Sports Center is still sorely lacking, at least for men's games.

Despite 4,000 fewer fans per game, the women's basketball team draws a more charged-up crowd. Coach Paul Sanderford runs a full-court offense and is trying to bring in national powers. In three years, Nebraska has developed a rivalry with national-ranked Iowa State; both games came down to the final possession.

Tickets are free for the women's games with student ID. For men's games, tickets got a lot cheaper to try to save Danny Nee's job, so prices might go back up. Student floor seating fills up quickly, and then, they send you to the rafters.

Time of Playing: Saturday, Sunday for the women, Tuesday and Wednesday for the men.

Concessions: Yes. Longest line can be found at the Goodrich ice cream station on upper level. Runza and Fairbury hot dogs too.

Other notables: HuskerVision, for those who want to watch it, and an NU walk of fame on the upper level costs a chunk of money, yet few people look at it. But's it worth one walk-through.

Wrestling: Turmoil was the password for the Nebraska wrestling last spring. The coach, Tim Neumann, was forced to resign over allegations of under-the-table payments to former wrestlers. Then a new coach, Mark Manning, was hired, though he wasn't the preferred choice among wrestlers. So, yes, it'll be a fun year to watch.

NU wrestles in the Bob Devaney Sports Center and the Coliseum.

Concessions: Usually.

Other notables: Not that many people have seen real wrestling. Nebraska is often among the top-ten teams in the nation, and the Big 12 Conference (which only fields five teams) is one of the two or three strongest nationwide.
