Experts to debate marriage amendment

BY JILL ZEMAN

Supporters and opponents of the Defense of Marriage Amendment will come head-to-head Thursday in a debate featuring speakers on each group's behalf.

The debate begins at 1:00 p.m. at Nebraska Wesleyan University.

Evan Wolfson, a nationally recognized attorney, will debate against Richard Duncan, a University of Nebraska-Lincoln law professor.

Wolfson is speaking against the amendment, which would ban same-sex marriages, civil unions and domestic partnerships in Nebraska.

Duncan, who is well-versed in constitutional issues, will argue in support of the amendment, said Guyla Mills, chairwoman of the Defense of Marriage Amendment - Yes to 416 committee.

Wolfson was brought to Lincoln by Nebraskans Against 416, a group that opposes the amendment, said Scott Winkler, campaign coordinator.

Wolfson should address the legal aspects of the amendment, including its effects on living wills and power of attorney rights, Winkler said.

"This is a very good opportunity for students, the media and people across the state to hear a credible person speak about these issues," Winkler said.

Mills said the debate is an opportunity to clarify the language in the amendment, as each group has interpreted it differently.

"The public will be able to see this amendment is good for Nebraska because it protects marriage," she said.
