

making a statement.

Who doesn't wish they had a closet like Cher's from "Clueless"?

Imagine how nice it would be to let a computer pick the clothes, never having to worry about a mismatch, especially if an important job interview is on the schedule.

Even if that isn't reality, never fear - there's a solution to all interview fashion troubles, it just takes a bit of know-how.

"I think the appearance does make an impact in an interview," Assistant Director for Career Services Christina Fielder said. "Look like you gave it thought. Always dress at least as well, if not better, than the people interviewing you."

Fielder advised students to go primarily with dressy, conservative clothing styles and dark, neutral colors such as black or navy for interviews.

"You don't want your outfit to talk for you," she said. "If it's too flashy, it becomes an issue."

Both Nate Rutt, manager of Gary Michael's Clothiers, 35th

Please see FASHION on 6

Warren Amos, Jr., senior finance major, and Olivia Fujan, sophomore in psychology, wear their own clothes that are appropriate for a job interview.

photos by David Clase

story by Lindsey Baker

2

BUSINESS VENTURE: Christina Felder, career fair coordinator, helps students get a job

INSIDE

8 HIGH CLASS: Graduate school means hard work, decision making and a host of opportunities

10

SHOP TALK: Career services offers advice, interviews for job seekers