The No. 18 Nebraska women's golf team finished its fall season Tuesday with a seventh place finish at the 18-team Price's Invitational held at New Mexico State University- Las Cruces. The Huskers finished the first day of play in seventh place only two strokes behind Texas Tech and were unable to move up in the tournament. NU shot a mediocre team score of 310 in the final round, while other teams continued to improve on their first day scores.

Nebraska finished the 54-hole tournament with a total score of 918, 32 strokes behind first place finisher and tournament host New Mexico State.

Junior Sarah Sasse led the Huskers as she stepped up in the final day of play, firing a third round score of 73 that gave her a tournament score of 223 and a two-way tie for sixth place, nine spots up from Monday night.

Senior Amy Roux also improved from Monday night, as she bumped up six spots after shooting a 77 in the final round, giving her a tournament score of 230 and a tie for 25th place.

Catha Fogelberg, a junior, finished third on the team for the Huskers, as she shot an 80 in the final round of play, leaving her with a 29th place finish.

Junior Amanda Sutcliffe rolled in at fourth place on the team as she fired an 80 in the final round, giving her a total score of 234 and a 35th place finish. Sophomore Stephanie Schaefer finished tied for 87th place after shooting a 90 in the final round.

Nebraska earned top-10 finishes in all six of its fall tournaments. The Huskers will next see action when they begin the spring season Feb. 23 at the Midwest Classic in Dallas.

overall hitting percentage of Nebraska's attack.

Cook said he had started to do some things differently in practice in order to raise the level of NU's play.

"Yesterday I presented to the team some video and our stats over the last two weeks," Cook said. "Our stats have been kind of going down in some areas, especially in attack. We've been exceptional in serving and blocking, but attack, ball handling and passing numbers have kind of gone down."

"I've challenged the team about getting better in those areas this week."

Senior tri-captain Jill McWilliams said after the KU match Saturday, the team had stopped worrying about the physical aspects of the game and became more concerned with the mental phases.

"Every match, we've got to be prepared no matter who it is," McWilliams said. "Sometimes it's not easy, but you just have to look at every team as tough competition."

"We're a big target being No. 1."

Women have high hopes in tennis championship

BY VINCE KUPPIG

The Nebraska women's tennis team is set to face its toughest competition of the year.

The Cornhuskers will complete their 2000 fall season at the ITA Central Championships this week in Omaha. The regional tournament starts today with the qualifying session. The main draw of the tournament starts Thursday and wraps up Sunday.

The Huskers are one of 26 teams competing at the regional tournament.

Competing for the Huskers are senior Ndali Ijomah, juniors Katarina Balan and Amy Frisch, freshman Rose Ketmayura and freshmen twins Rebecca and Leslie Harvey.

Ijomah, Balan and Frisch have already received bids to the singles main draw portion of the tournament. Both Leslie and Rebecca Harvey are hoping to win today and qualify for the main draw. The Huskers are also sending three doubles teams.

Frisch, competing in her first regional fall tournament, said she didn't know what to really expect.

"I'm just going to go out there and give it everything I have," Frisch said. "Hopefully I can do well and make it pretty far."

This week's tournament is the first action for many of the team members since the Wichita State Shocker Classic in early September.

Frisch said practice has helped the team prepare for this tournament.

"We've been working so much at match play with each other that we should be in good shape for this tournament," Frish said.

"Everyone looks like they're playing well, and I think we're pretty prepared."
