

Newspaper's funding fight finally put to bed

"Newspapers are different than any other business because you can't make a prediction about how much advertising money you'll make every month," he said.

Next year, the newspaper will have more competition for advertisers, Willbanks said. This is because the residence halls will be offering three newspapers to dorm residents for a fee that is included in their rent.

Dan Shattil, Daily Nebraskan general manager, said advertising revenue so far this year is down $80,000 from last year. He said the newspaper expected less revenue, but it only budgeted for a $20,000 loss.

"Student fees stabilize our budget," he said. "If you're going to cut our funding, now is not the time to do it with all the economic concerns and our advertising revenue going downhill."

In other ASUN news:
Senators passed Bylaw D

with a vote of 16-4. The bylaw made changes to four chapters of the ASUN bylaws.

One major change is ASUN senators will not be required to attend every meeting of the student organizations with which they are required to keep in contact. Each senator is assigned to six organizations.

However, the senators are still required to maintain good communication with the organizations.

Another change is some ASUN organizations that are no longer useful were cut, Schafer said.

One of the committees being cut is the Student Impact Team. The team was geared toward getting freshman acquainted with student government, Schafer said.

Candace Cain, Teachers College senator, questioned why the SIT committee was being cut.

Cecily Rometo, Student Impact Team chairwoman, said the committee doesn't get much done because it doesn't have a real purpose other than to get freshman acquainted with ASUN.

The organization could shine a bad light on ASUN because it accomplishes little and is linked to student government.

"It can put a bad face on ASUN," she said.

Another big change is that ASUN will pay a person to be a public relations liaison to handle the graphic design and layout of ASUN materials. Also, a person will be paid to design and maintain the ASUN Web site.

Schafer said both these jobs will serve as an important link between student government and students.

The student migration game was also decided to be at the University of Missouri-Columbia.

The Board of Regents granted ASUN the opportunity to designate one away football game as the "migration game."

Schafer recommended the game against Missouri.

University of Kansas game, Schafer replied, "Kansas sucks."

ASUN also passed Government Bill 29, which created a University Bookstore Committee.

The committee will make recommendations to the bookstore.

The committee will be made up of 11 members: four faculty members chosen by the Academic Senate president, three student members chosen by ASUN and two staff members chosen by the university president.

The bookstore director and assistant vice chancellor for university services will serve on the committee as nonvoting members.
