

EXCHANGES.

The Shining Light who edits this small but exceedingly bright column, once took it upon himself to criticize the monthly magazine of the North Carolina University, for which he was scored by some of his brainy brother-exchangists with bitter scorn and derision, one of the aforesaid brethren even going so far as to say that he suspected that this column was afflicted with a bottle green fungus growth on its back, which same I indignantly deny, so there now! The exchange editor is not yet convinced that a monthly magazine is a true college paper. But I must say that the first article, on "Journalism," in the November number of the North Carolina magazine is interesting and entirely correct in its view. The writer advances ideas unlike the usual sentiments of college papers on journalism. He says in effect, that a newspaper man on a great city paper is but one cog in a big machine. He does not know what independence is.

The University of Wisconsin has offered three prizes of $50, $30, and $20, for the three best University songs handed in by the last day of February. A committee consisting of five members of the faculty will award the prizes. The songs must be original and have the "local flavor." This reminds me that the University of Nebraska has no college song—unless "I feel like" can be called a song, which question is open to debate.
