You want to get a holiday NEBRASKAN before they are all gone.

We have on hand several copies of the holiday number which we are desirous of getting rid of as soon as possible. There will be no Annual published this year, but while we do not consider this issue in any way a rival to the Sombrero, still it remains the only publication worthy to be retained as a memento of your college life for the year '94-5. When those on hand are gone, they cannot be reproduced and it behooves every one to secure a copy as soon as possible.

Professor Burnet, instructor in German, has been obliged on account of ill-health to leave his work and go to New Mexico. Few professors in the University were better liked by their pupils. He was one who did not discourage a student when that student made a mistake. He was kind and gentle and his classes absorbed their knowledge from him instead of having him rapid recovery, and we look with a great deal of pleasure for his return next year.

Special effort is going to be put forth to enable the choruses to make a good showing on the evening of February 15th—Charter Day—and to put the oratorio upon the Lansing stage in Commencement week in fine style. There ought to be a much larger number of voices, especially in the advanced chorus. The male side of the house is not weak as far as the voices of those present is concerned but it is weak in numbers. As long as credits are given for all work which students are willing to do in this line there ought to be a very large increase in the number of those who are in this way not only adding to their credit-points but are deriving pleasure and gratification from the work itself and from the service that such work is doing to the university.

NEARLY every one is more or less familiar with the fact that there is suffering among the people of western Nebraska, because of the failure of crops. For the last few years, practically nothing has been raised there. Many families, as a result have nothing on which to subsist during the winter and but very scanty clothing to protect them from the cold.

Undoubtedly a few accounts of the condition of these people have been exaggerated. There is, however, absolute proof of urgent needs in many counties. Students, as a rule, busy with other affairs, have paid but very little attention to this matter. They have not been directly interested in it for nobody has presented the subject to them. It is true that the great majority of students are very poor themselves, but very few are so hard up that they cannot contribute a few cents or an old garment for the benefit of someone who has nothing.

Considerable interest is being aroused among the students and a large contribution will undoubtedly be made. Many members of the faculty are deeply interested and will give what they are able. A few cents from each of our 1,400 students would make to a considerable amount.

This action on the part of the students will not only show that they sympathize with the sufferers in the west, but will also call the attention of the state to the university. People will see that we are not all bound up in self, that we are in touch with the common people and that we are desirous of doing our part in all things.

AMUSEMENTS.

NEW FUNKE OPERA HOUSE,
JANUARY 14TH.

Milton Nobles' "For Revenue Only" is a splendid play, full of humor and ludicrous scenes that happily illustrate certain newspaper and political methods, as well as reveal certain varieties of that untamed and often unwashed sovereign, the American voter. As "Tom Knowl," an adventurous Bohemian, and all-around newspaper man, with ready wit, boundless resources, and large, cold nerve, Milton Nobles is a living picture who captures his audience in the first inning, and holds it to the end of the game. That is the way Nobles has of doing, no matter in what play or character he appears. It is refreshing to see a legitimate actor who relies on his art, and not on scenery, machinery and anatomical adjuncts to entertain his audiences, and Milton Nobles is one of the too few modern actors who does this. He is ably supported by Dolly Nobles, and an efficient and specially selected company.

The second one in the series of artist's recitals to be given by the conservatory will be held, in the University chapel, probably on Wednesday evening of next week. It will be given by Martinus Sieveking, and every one who has a spark of music in his soul should be present. In one of the numbers on the program he will be assisted by Miss Schofield, on another grand piano. There is every reason to believe that the affair will be a success. A crowded house is assured.

The Art Exhibit.

The art exhibit has come and gone. But the students have had the privilege of seeing the fine pictures and have been benefitted most assuredly. Even the person who has the least taste for art must be lifted up by seeing such beautiful bits of scenery, such noble pictures of men and women.

Of course the greatest picture we had was Benson's "Firelight." It was hung admirably, and was the first thing beheld on entering and the last thing seen on leaving the armory. The haughty girl sitting by the firelight had all the admirers at her feet, and she seemed in no way disconcerted by it. I would hate to say that her rich dowry ($1,000) had anything to do with admiration she received, and yet it was hinted to me. In looking at this picture, one at least learned what the much discussed impression was.

Two other pictures that had many admirers were Carl Newman's two brilliant canvasses hung at either side of Benson's master piece. They were natural and that is a good deal. Perhaps they were a little more natural than Benson's "Firelight." The "Lamp-light" was perhaps the most pleasing of the two. The lovely girl, with her eyes cast down reading a letter was splendid. In gazing at it one had a feeling that if she should raise her eyelids great bewildering eyes would stare out at one. "Harvesting in Utah Valley" was another good picture; it was painted by Evans. "In the West" had many admirers; it was painted by Lorenz. It was a truly typical western scene and on that account was appreciated. Some of the landscapes by Robbins were fine. "A Windy Day" looked too highly colored when one first saw it, but one grew to like it extremely well.

Two paintings by Ralph Henri were excellent. One "A Wet Day, Atlantic City," and the other "A Sunny Day" at the same place were good. Of course they were impressionistic in the extreme. A canal scene by Robinson had many admirers. The atmosphere of this was remarkably good. And so one might go on endlessly. Every time one went there he found something new to admire.

After doing the Chicago pictures Lincoln pictures came in for their share of admirers. And the showing was good too. Mrs. James H. Canfield had some excellent canvases. Her work shows painstaking care in drawing and detail. Her "Soldien" is possibly the best one she has on exhibition. A very good homely picture was her "Substance of Things Hopeful for."

Miss Cora Parker has some very clever work. Her little "Lamp-light" was excellent, very impressionistic. The pink roses owned by Dr. Giffen were fresh and natural. Miss Alice Righter had one little scene in the woods that was a gem. Miss Righter's charcoal sketches were very fine also. The work of the students of the university was good. Some of the drawing was well done and one or two of the paintings showed talent.

WILLIAM REED DUNROY.

State Teachers' Association.

While most of the students were away enjoying their vacation, the annual meeting of the State Teachers' association was held at the university from December 26th to the 29th. The sessions were held in the chapel, the society halls and the chemical lecture room. The more important addresses were delivered in the Lansing Opera House. Many of the students who remained in the city availed themselves of the opportunity and attended the meetings, especially the addresses of Professor Judson of Chicago University and of Bishop Vincent.

The university furnished several numbers of the program. Papers were read by Professors Lees, Adams, and Bates. Professor Wolfe was on for a "discussion" of "the child." Several other professors took part in discussions.

A great many alumni and former students who are now engaged in teaching, were present. Among the alumni were George Whaley '93 of the Columbus schools, G. L. Babcock '94 of Palmyra, Schuyler Miller '94 of Schuyler, Anna Edwards '94 of Sterling, Ill., Elizabeth Field '93 of Ashland, F. F. Tucker '94 of Nebraska City, Duncanson '90 of Nebraska City, Wagner '88. Among the former students were J. W. Searson of Weeping Water, O. T. Reedy of Beatrice, Miss Alva Dempster of Odell, Miss Elizabeth Forsythe of Kearney, D. W. Crabtree, A. A. Monroe of South Omaha and W. D. Leaming of Decatur, Neb.
