The Hesperian evinces some anxiety about class day. The committee in charge have their plans perfected for the day, but do not care to make them public property so soon. When the time comes it will be made known to all interested what will constitute the day's program.

The most popular books of the year—not counting "Trilby"—have been Hall Caine's "Manxman," of which 50,000 copies were sold in England alone; Edna Lyall's "Doreen," and Marie Corelli's "Barabbas," which has been translated into several languages. You can get all these at reduced prices at Herpolsheimer & Co.'s.

"It's all right," says Col. Parmelee, as he takes a couple of sheets of history paper off of several bunches of twenty he has counted out, in order to even up with the extra ten left over from the ream he has been counting. "For 1,420 people to come down here in the
