THE PHILHARMONIC CONCERT.

The third Philharmonic concert, offered last Monday evening at the Oliver was perhaps the most enjoyable one of the series given thus far this season. The program was much lighter than its immediate predecessor, and for this reason it was played more smoothly and met with a more hearty and immediate response from the audience.

For the first time in nearly a year Director Hagenow depended wholly upon Lincoln soloists. Mrs. E. Lewis Baker, the well known contralto, sang a Beethoven scena and aria, with the orchestra, and a group of songs, accompanied by Miss Hagenow at the piano. Mrs. Baker's encores were Nevin's "One Spring Morning" and Hawley's "Were I a Star."

Mr. Hagenow took advantage of the presence of a fine trombone player in his orchestra to give that instrument a solo position. Mr. Richardson played the song, "Oh Thou Sublime Sweet Evening Star" from Wagner's Tannhauser, and in response to an encore gave Arthur Sullivan's famous "Lost Chord." Both were played with a full mellow tone and a genuine appreciation of the musical content of the songs.

The orchestra gave a fine variety of music, with a leaning towards the dance airs that rest an audience and at the same time set the feet in motion. The "American Patrol" was interrupted by a burst of applause. It was followed by Sousa's "Stars and Stripes Forever" as an encore. The program was as follows:

March—"Love is King," Innes.
 Overture—"Raymond," Thomas.
 Scena and aria—"Ah Perfido," Beethoven; Mrs. E. Lewis Baker.
 Invitation a la Valse—C. M. v Weber.
 Song to the "Evening Star," from "Tannhauser,"—Wegner; Mr. Will B. Richardson.
 Two Slavonic dances—No. 1, C major; No. 2, E minor; Dvorak.
 Songs—(a) "Der Doppelganger," Schubert; (b) "Serenade du Passant," Massenet; (c) "Dearest Heart Farewell," Strelzki; Mrs. E. Lewis Baker.
 American Patrol—Mencham.
 Serenade—"Rococo," Meyer-Helmond.
 March et Cortège—"La Reine de Saba," Gounod.
