

EXCHANGE.

The senior class at Yale, Harvard, Princeton, Amherst and Dartmouth have adopted the cap and gown.—Sequoia.

Senator Allen, of Nebraska, is a big, burly man, who looks like a prosperous dealer in live stock. Shortly after his arrival in Washington, he was stopped at the door of the senate chamber by a new door-keeper, who informed him that no one save senators was allowed on the floor. Mr. Allen smiled sadly, waved his hand and said: "Very well, sonny; I'm a senator. I don't look it, I know; but I am, just the same," and passed into the sacred precincts.—Argonaut.

Those of our subscribers who are interested in the silver question may be glad to know that a silver dollar will liquidate their obligations to our business manager on the same basis now as before the vote on the repeal bill.—Ex.

I put my arms around her waist,
In a light and crowded hall,
But then 'twas perfectly proper,
For 'twas at the junior ball.

I put my arms around her waist,
As we wandered alone thro' the wood,
And again 'twas perfectly proper
Because—she said I could.

—Daily Cardinal.

Twenty-two Yale graduates will coach foot-ball teams this fall. It might puzzle some of our grandmothers to determine what they teach in Yale anyway.

A prominent lawyer, who has been greatly annoyed by chatter about World's Fair, has had the following card printed, which saves talking: "Yes, I have been to the Fair. It is great; but I haven't time to talk about it."—Sel.

"What did the Gracchi do when they found they could not be re-elected?" asked the professor of Latin the other day. "Stuffed the ballot box," responded a gallant freshman from the back seat.—Athenaeum.

Every exchange that we have interviewed thus far has had "what Chauncey Depew said about the class of '53 at Yale." Do you know what it was?

It is said Mr. J. G. Blaine was a good foot ball player when at college. It is needless to remark that the great statesman knew nothing about "bucking the line."

While Europe has but ninety-four universities, yet she has 1,723 more professors, and 41,814 more students than the 360 colleges and universities of United States.

The great World's Exposition has proved an especial boon to College students, giving them an immense object lesson in every branch of study in which they were individually interested.

Yes, Turkish Theatre, Buffalo Bill, Coliseum, and Dahomey Village especially.
