

Mr. Thomas, a Junior of last year, is now on a ranch in Colorado, where he has gone for his health. He does not expect to be back this year.

The class of '96 feels honored in having one of its members, Mr. Weaver, chosen to deliver the address to the pioneers of Nebraska at Omaha fair week.

J. C. Hamming will probably not be back this year as he has received the nomination for district clerk of Washington county. May success be his, is the wish of his many University friends.

G. M. Edmundson, class of '95, passed through here one day last week, enroute for his home in Iowa where he goes to take charge of his father's bank for a time. He expects to begin practice soon.

Prospects are bright for a large attendance this year. Nearly all last year's Juniors will be back to complete their course while many have called upon Dean Reese and signified their intention to enroll for Junior work.

C. C. Young, class of '95, died at his home in Oakland, Neb., of typhoid fever, on August 28th. While here he was associated with the law firm of Talbot, Bryan & Allen, all of whom speak highly of his ability and join his many University friends in mourning his early death.

J. P. Walsh is located at Delta, Colo. In a letter to a friend he states that he has a paying and a growing practice. He won his first criminal case and received the congratulations of some of the best lawyers of the state on his address to the jury. He says the credit for his success in delivery is due almost entirely to the elocutionary training he received under Mrs. Manning.

One of the most desirable features of our law school is the elocutionary training offered its members. Arrangements have been made whereby instruction may be received several times a week without extra charge. Dean Reese heartily recommends everyone to take this work who can and as Mrs. Manning has kindly consented to give two or more lessons a week, exclusively for the benefit of law students, it is to be hoped that many may take advantage of the opportunity. The value of such training can hardly be estimated and Mr. Walsh, of whom mention has been made, writes: "I hope all the boys will take advantage of her able instruction." See that her classes of last year be more than doubled.

SENIORS—WHERE THEY WERE AT AND WHAT THEY WERE AT.

Miss Harwood visited in Colorado for a time.

Saville had a large strawberry patch near Omaha.

Charley Schwarz made up school work in Lincoln.

Miss Compton remained at home and in the Uni. library.

June Smails did a lot of hard studying at her home in Fremont.

Miss Annie Spurr camped out with Miss Wheeler at Ulysses, Nebraska.

Tim McCarty was on the farm near Osceola letting his moustache grow.

Miss Frances Morton made up English literature at her home in Falls City.

McClave did some studying in Lincoln and remained on the farm the remainder of the time.

Nels Pollard says he superintended the street railway system of Philadelphia during the summer.

Harvey Heald remained at home waiting for school to open. His hands are hardened from running a lawn-mower.

Little Elmore, who by the way is six feet one inch in height, was up at Lake Geneva and visited in Illinois and Kansas.

Maude Atkinson has done an immense amount of traveling since last we met. Two of the various points she visited were Colorado and Lake Geneva.
