This column is always desirous of correcting erroneous impressions. The latest associated press dispatches inform us authoratively that not R. S. Baker but Major William McKinley is to be the presidential nominee of the coming republican national convention.

A CO-ED OBSERVATION.

You swear by me whate'er I do,
You say you love me still;
You're working me for tickets to
The girls' gymnasium drill.

Now, Weaver, when I heard how you,
With haughty shout, defiant mien,
Had rescued that brave college crew
From bondage and the old 'machine,'
I wished to pat you on the back,
And crown your brow with laurels green;
I, too, can fight for party, but
I will not grind the old 'machine.'
