

Here, Jack! And then there would begin a genuine live affray.

In this manner I herded conjectures and fought cattle; and hated that old white cow for forty days; each day I told over to myself a bigger dream.

And yet what is all this written for? Why, I learned to dream; I still dream. Sometimes I lie awake at night and dream, and then fall asleep and dream. Lo, now I scarcely know fact from fancy.

FRED WEST.
