Competitive drill promises to be an enthusiastic success tomorrow. Company colors are seen at every turn. The "co-ed's" all wear them. As is generally the case, each company thinks it has already theoretically secured the cup, but "there's many a slip 'twixt the cup and the lip." By the amount of extra drills a stranger might be led to think that the boys intended to help Greece as soon as examinations were over.

EDITOR OF THE HESPERIAN:—Since the Junior Annual, which has just appeared, gives no chance of reply to those who have been attacked, I request a little space in your paper to direct some well meaning remarks to the Board of Editors, and especially to the resident editor-in-chief. For the general merits of the Sombbrero I have nothing but praise, for the literary skill and artistic work is a credit to the university and the class of '98. The one thing, however, which I cannot commend is the policy of making the annual an organ for its editor-in-chief or some of his staff to vent their personal spite upon those whose only fault is that they have not pulled political wires in favor of those who manage the annual. The very original editor-in-chief has seen fit to represent me in the annual as one continually asserting my opinions, opinions, which he gravely assures you, are "always in the wrong." Also as a mere memory machine entirely foreign to original ideas. These attacks give me no concern among those who know both the editor and myself. There are others, however, both here and elsewhere who will take these things as a true representation. Thus a man who is obliged to earn his own living may be injured by such malicious publications. It may be witty and original to represent some as devoid of brains and others as fools and unable to tell the truth, but if such is the case I do not aspire to originality. To retain my ability of "memorizing small things" is preferable. It seems to me that a production which is supposed to represent a class in the university should be above all personality of a disagreeable or malicious nature. Such things are beneath the dignity of an institution of learning, especially of one like the University of Nebraska. Whether or not Mr. McKay was the author of these petty thrusts, he shows himself devoid of either good sense or appreciation of the rights of others in letting them appear. If an annual cannot refrain from abuse, it had better be kept from the press. Class harmony and college dignity will not suffer by ignoring those of whom you can say no good.

Don't Abuse Your Eyes.

If you go on allowing your eyes to smart and ache and trouble you, you may never be able to make them strong again. I have studied the eye and I know what I say is correct. The eye is a patient, long suffering organ, but will snap at last and then all the oculists and opticians in the world cannot put it together again. Don't procrastinate. Any irritation whatever about the eye means something. Come and find out. Examination free.
