

BIYBY'S RETREAT.

Attend chapel.

Don't be a clam—look pleasant! This old world doesn't collect its taxes in frowns.

BOOMER BAMBOOZLED.

Dear Jo, I like your diligence
Your broad guage smile so sweet and rare;
I always thought good common sense
Was stored beneath your curly hair

Until I heard you stayed so late
In making that choice evening call.
You were so dazed you couldn't see straight,
Could scarcely find your way at all.

And when at last your door you tried
Though closed not by the lock and key,
You swore a little on the side
Because it opened not to thee.

Your pattering footprints madly tell
The sequel to that midnight spree
Your lodging bill at the Hotel*
Was paid by your friend "Ol" and me.

Now Boomer, if you must stay late
Oh heed a bosom friend, beware!
And put a balance wheel among
Those whirring cogs beneath your hair.

COME TO CHAPEL.

Are you so giddy that you want to grin?
Come to the chapel
Are you so crabbed that your nose snubs your chin?
Come to the chapel
Are you worried over flunks unnumbered
Or by the prospect of one are you cumbered
Bury them deep where other flunks have slumbered.
Come to the chapel
All ye gay ones all ye solemn
All ye stray ones get in the column
Come to the chapel
At eight o'clock Saturday evening and hear the minstrels.

ROBBY GOOD ENOUGH FOR ME.

"Wiley" Woodruff the coach of the "Rock Chalks" is writing swell articles for the K. C. Star on football. Robby doesn't spread so much on paper but his boys will show the "Jay Hawkers" a few things on the gridiron this fall.

You are clever with your pen,
Wiley Woodruff,
You can manage paper men,
Wiley Woodruff,
But for coaching that is nobby
I've developed quite a hobby
And am satisfied with Robby
Wiley Woodruff.

SLOAN LEARNING TO DANCE.

As autumn days are growing late

And spoony ones hang on the gate
He seeks the master.

As slumbering steps give way apace
And airy light ones take their place
He trips it faster.

He's the envy of the line:
Both Garringer and Kline
Steal sidelong glances.

Ah his blooming smile alone
Would pierce a heart of stone
As he skips and prances.
