The fellow who steals in class recitations, weakens himself, implicates his prompter and deceives his teacher. He may get a high mark, but that is a false showing. He may have the favor of the teacher, but that is treachery. He may have the friendship of his coacher, but he cannot but come to despise the pilferer of a record, the taker of others' knowledge. Some day the crutches will be gone and then "and great was the fall thereof." Let him fall.

Regent Von Torrell made a short stopover at the University, Wednesday afternoon.

J. C. Hitchman spent Sunday with his folks in Weeping Water.

V. C. Batic was compelled to return to his home at Overton, Neb. He expects to return to school in May.

Chancellor McLean inspected the Worthington Military Academy last Tuesday afternoon and gave an address there in the evening.

O. R. Bowman, class of '94, who is superintendent of Waverly schools, visited the University last Saturday.

R. W. Harris, principal of Wahoo schools, shook hands with Uni. friends Saturday evening, on his way home to spend Sunday.

Supt. Maynard Spurk is arranging his second annual series of University lectures for his institute next summer.

On next Saturday, at 2 o'clock, company E will contest with Company F in a series of events to decide the supremacy in athletic affairs. About one month ago company F challenged E company to a "tug-o-war" which was promptly accepted; out of the challenge grew the coming contest. The following events have been arranged for: Relay, Three-legged, Sack, Egg and Spoon, Accoutrement, and Bucket Race, and "Tug-o-War." The contest is very popular with company members and each event is crowded with entries. The following prizes have been donated by Lincoln merchants: Bumstead & Tuttle, dollar necktie; Perkins & Sheldon, pair tennis shoes; D. T. Smith, gold stick pin; Hardy Furniture Co, standard cyclometer; Gardner Tailoring Co, one dress shirt; Sutton & Hollowbush one box candy.

J. T. Jones, of Weeping Water, spent Sunday with friends at the University.

Prof. Caldwell has an excellent article in the Home Study department of the Chicago Record for March 22, on "The Federal Courts." The history and constitution of the various federal courts are set forth together with a review of a number of the greatest cases decided in the Supreme Court.

Miss Mabel Tuttle, for nearly seven years executive clerk of the University, retired from her official position last Saturday evening. During her term of service, she has acted as private secretary to the Chancellor, secretary of the faculty, and has had entire charge of the outer office, which has reached its present high degree of system and efficiency under her care. She has supervised the accredited high school records and work, devised the present systematized plan of registration to meet the growing needs, has had charge of summer school registration, and the registration of all new and unclassified students, besides being herself a whole bureau of helpful information for students, faculty and state educators. In addition she has been regularly intrusted with all the University printing, proof-reading, revising, etc., which includes among many other duties, the revision and printing of the annual calendar, the printing of all circulars sent from the University, the blanks and stationery of all departments, and the numerous bulletins of the experiment station. The printing alone would occupy the time of an ordinary person.

It is but due Miss Tuttle to say that she never betrayed a single trust or confidence that she was never found wanting in judgment and discretion even in the minutest details, and that she possessed that rare gift of being a true friend to all, a partisan of no faction, a public servant of masterly efficiency, a private confidant of unswerving fidelity. Students, faculty and her wide circle of friends among the educators of Nebraska, join in unanimous regrets at her withdrawal. It is not expected that any one or two can be found who will adequately fill her place in the office, and nothing can efface the deep sense of personal loss felt by the many who learned to know her by her works.
