The Seniors held a class meeting last Friday afternoon at which they decided to hold a Senior Promenade this year and to levy an assessment on the members of the class to aid the "Class Play."

A very interesting little book is No. 12 of the Patriot which is a characterization of Henry Clay by Professor H. W. Caldwell. The book shows careful investigation of the sources and is written in Professor Caldwell's interesting style. It is a most valuable little work.

The graduate club will hold its second meeting for the year in the English Club den Saturday night. Prof. Barbour, Miss Herron, and Mr. Hunter will furnish the program and a social good time will be enjoyed. The officers of the club are endeavoring to interest all graduate students. This meeting will be entirely informal and no one need stay away out of bashfulness.

Professor Fossler has adopted an admirably arranged book for beginners for use in the class room, this semester. The book is, "Der Zerbrockene Krug" edited by Edward S. Joynes, of South Carolina College, and published in 1898 by Heath and Co., Boston. Many German idioms are included in the text; there is a careful system of notes; and a portion is devoted to composition work.
