COMMUNICATIONS.

The Nebraskan-Hesperian: Dear Sirs—Would not a paragraph with regard to the new clocks in the halls and, incidentally, giving some facts with regard to our university time service, be timely? I sometimes hear of students who think the bells ring as they used to before they were connected with the observatory. Possibly, the student's watch is what is erratic.

G. D. SWEZEY.

Three new clocks have been placed in the university halls, one in the library, one in university hall and one in Nebraska hall. They are designed to inform the belated student whether he must needs scurry to get to class before the bell rings and in general to give the approximate time of day. They are not electrically controlled and will not take the place of the bells. The latter will still give the more exact time, as they are rung by the observatory clock. This clock is kept very close to the time, although in a long spell of cloudy weather, like that just experienced, when observations of the stars cannot be made, its error may amount to several seconds. Generally it is kept within five seconds of true time; most of the time within one or two seconds. The largest error it has had this year was fourteen and a half seconds on October 4, when some experiments were being made upon the pendulum, which made it necessary not to disturb it. Ordinarily any small error in the clock when revealed by observations made upon the stars would be corrected by placing small weights on the pendulum.

WILL LECTURE TO PALLADIANS.

Henry Eames has arranged to give his Shakespeare lecture recital under the auspices of the Palladian literary society Saturday evening, January 20, 1899. The entertainment has never been given in Lincoln except at a private recital, to which admission was by ticket. The students and faculty of the university will have an opportunity to enjoy an entertainment not only instructive, but satisfying both to their literary and musical tastes. The lecture will exhibit Shakespeare in music. Mr. Eames intends giving this entertainment during the holidays at various places between here and Chicago. On January 2 he will give the lecture recital at Northwestern university.

LECTURE BY GEORGE R. BOOMER.

George R. Boomer of the First Nebraska regiment, a former student of the University of Nebraska, will deliver his lecture on the Philippines before the students of the university on Friday evening, December 8. Mr. Boomer will illustrate the lecture with views taken by himself and Mr. Reedy. While on the firing line of the First Nebraska Mr. Boomer carried a kodak with him until he was wounded and forced from the field. Mr. Reedy then continued taking views until the end of the engagements in which the Nebraskans figured. They have in all over three hundred views, which add materially to the interest of the lecture. These views are shown with the aid of a large and expensive stereopticon. The entertainment has been receiving much praise over the state where it has been given. It will be given to the university under the management of the Palladian literary society.
