Prof. Stout of the department of civil engineering made a trip to Columbus, last Thursday, to arrange for experiments in irrigation to be conducted by the farmers themselves. The object of these experiments is to find out the amount of water necessary to irrigate an acre in order to produce the best results viewed from an economic standpoint.

The Phi Beta Kappa oration will be given by Dr. William F. Slocum, president of Colorado college. President Slocum was here in 1894, when the university held its silver anniversary, and was then honored with the degree of LL. D. from the University of Nebraska. He is prominent among educators of the west, and is an able public speaker.

During the last week students in the laboratory of the civil engineering department have been making series of tests of the cross-breaking strength of roofing glass, for Mr. Roberts an architect of Lincoln. The result of these experiments shows that a piece of roofing glass one foot long and one square inch in cross-section, supported at the ends will sustain a load of 200 lbs. at the middle.

The resignation of Mrs. Wilson, dean of women in the university, is regretted by her many friends. The news was something of a surprise, although when Mrs. Wilson accepted the position two years ago, she stated clearly that she could not think of holding it more than two years. The duties connected with the office are quite arduous, and she finds it impossible to continue her work in that line.

ing to look over the university before giving a definite answer. His arrival was announced by the clanging of the bell and in a very short time the chapel was filled with enthusiastic students and members of the faculty, who cheered and yelled at the appearance of Dr. Andrews. When the students had quieted down, the chancellor-elect made a pleasing and impressive short talk, after which he made close examination of the premises and was very agreeably impressed by the organization of the university. Dr. Andrews left Saturday evening for Chicago and will reserve his decision in the matter until he learns of the action of the Chicago school board regarding his appointment.

Last Wednesday afternoon Dr. Ellwood's class in charities and corrections were driven out to the poor farm through the kindness of conveyances furnished by C. B. Gregory and R. A. Drain, superintendent of the poor farm. The institution is six miles northwest of the city and contains about twenty-five inmates. Dr. Ellwood and class registered their names in the book of visitors in which it was found that the only other university class ever visiting the institution was in 1890 when Prof. E. G. Warner's class in charities and corrections was also there and registered their names. The class under Dr. Ellwood will visit the Home for the Friendless, state insane asylum and state penitentiary on Wednesday afternoons for the following three or four weeks.
