I hereby announce myself as a candidate for election to the approval of the association at its annual election, May 4. J. WESTOVER.

I, E. B. Brooks, do hereby announce myself as a candidate for election to the athletic board subject to the approval of the association. E. B. BROOKS.

The Bashful Man.

I care not whether she be short or tall,
Lithe, plump, blonde or brunette,
If only she will love me, that is all
I'll ask, dear girls—and yet
With these concessions promised in advance,
And this, that I'll be good,
All womankind still looks at me askance
In my lone bachelorhood.
I wonder why? I'd love to ask, but O!
My courage oases out;
My heart beats fast, I squirm and puff
and blow,
When nice girls are about.
My feet are plous, so I cannot waltz;
I'm not a man for style;
I try to talk, my voice sounds harsh and
false;
I suffer much from bile.
It really makes me sad. I tire of life—
I was not born to roam—
I'd give most all I've got to have a wife,
A living place—a home,
But, hang it all! my nerve is out of joint,
My head is in a whirl;
Somehow I cannot work 'round to the point
Of popping to a girl.

His Sudden Belief.

"George," she said, and her brilliant eyes sought the glowing embers, "I don't believe you love me as you used to."

"Why, Fanny!" he exclaimed, slipping on his dragoon embroidered slippers, "you are my idol."

"But you don't show it; you don't worship me a tiny bit."

"Fanny!" and his voice rang with all that is empyreal, "only the wicked worship idols."

And with a gaze of uncertainty she again sought the embers.—Chicago News.

Satisfied.

"Professor, who is the happier, the man who owns a million pounds, or he who has seven daughters?"

"The man who has seven daughters."

"Why so?"

"He who has a million pounds wishes for more; the man who has seven daughters does not."—Boston Traveler

Couldn't stand it.

"Did you ever get the money D'Auber owed you?"

"No. He wanted to square accounts by painting my house inside and out."

"Well, that would have evened things up. Why didn't you let him?"

"I was going to, until I saw one of his pictures."—Philadelphia Press

The Literary Digest
Issued Weekly.
32 Pages, Illustrated.
"All the Periodicals in One."

THE LITERARY DIGEST has taken the highest rank as a weekly review of current thought at home and abroad, in the realms of literature, art, science, religion, politics, sociology, travel, discovery, business, etc. Its contents are selected and translated from the world's choicest periodical literature, and are given partly in summary, partly in direct quotation. Discussion and information on all sides of important questions are given. The contents each week cover a field so diversified as to make THE LITERARY DIGEST indispensable to the busy man who desires to keep up with the thought of the time, but who lacks the leisure for such a task.

OPINIONS FROM AUTHORITIES:

Edwin Markham, Author of "The Man With the Hoe": "THE LITERARY DIGEST is one of the two or three most valuable journals that come to my table."

Ex-Senator John J. Ingalls: "THE LITERARY DIGEST enlarges the boundaries of intelligence."

Senator William P. Frye: "It will afford immense assistance to the scholars of the country."

Gov. John P. Altgeld, of Illinois: "THE LITERARY DIGEST is one of the best publications in America. To a student of current literature it is invaluable."

Bearing Up.

"Mistletoe is awfully scarce this year," she remarked. "Mamma tried everywhere to get a sprig."

"Well," he replied, consolingly, as his arm stole around her, "we'll try to struggle along without it this year."—Philadelphia North American.
