NOTES AND COMMENTS.

It is no joke to joke-that is, when $\mid$ for doing what I have indicated. A you are obliged to write 30 many feet cold in the head aids students in the and inches of scintillating wit and humor every so often. It has to come whether you feel funny or not. With eight-hundred-sixty-nine (869) lines of Latin and five (5) History outlines from last week, glaring at you, you must, forsooth, throw intellectual handsprings and skin IIterary cats! Every one else has some excuse to write, but Notes and Comments must be "struck off," as Mr. Gladstone said "at a single time by the brain and purpose of man." N. and C. could of course note the occurrences which occur about the university, and comment thereon, but he is too busy, trying to make up his back work to see anything; he forgets to go to his classes and invariably uses his eight o'clock gait. He sees nothing and therefore must make up something out of his head. It has already been noted that other writers have something to work on, for instance:
The athletic man: The last week on the gridiron shows a marked improvement. and-are doing wonderful work at and-_ (Fill the blanks with the names of your frat. brothers and their positions.)
The society man: Miss entertained the - The at was spent in Speaking of weals, A. M. Vose, captain of the second team had an interesting experience with a bicycle a short time ago. He had to go to his room on $Q$ street in double time and borrowed Manager Tukey's wheel, whether with the owner's permission or not does not appear.

Let these stars represent the time waich elapsed. "Tuke" was looking for his machine, he needed it and didn t care who knew it. Some more time passed.
Then the Captain was seen leading the bicycle up the walk; apparently it did not wish to come for he was walking slowly, and there was a pained expression and a large raw place on his face.
From his disjointed account it appears that he was making good gains up Q street when he saw a pile of bricks, from the car tracks, about four feet high, extending almost across the street. He decided, promptly that a run around the right end was the proper play. Then according to his account it was night and he observed a very brilliant meteoric display. This is altogether improbable.
Whether the wheel misunderstood the signal, or merely acted on its own responsibility will never be known, but instead of making an end run it bucked the line-the bricks tackled low and held the wheel, but the Cap tain went over for a touch down.

Still speaking of wheels, no one would think, to see Professor Fossler ride, that he had ever been humiliated and (figuratively) tralled in the dust by a bicycle. Yet such was so.
It was when the Professor first made his debut as a wheelman. Practice had made him so proficent that the wheel could only throw him three times out of tive, and certain members of the faculty had suggested that he was atraid to ride.

All went well till our hero came to the asphalt on N street. The sprinkler had just turned the dust on the streat into a slippery paste of about the consistency-or inconsistencyof soft soap.
That is the only reason the Professor was not trailed in the dust.

No one was near enough to hear his remarks as he slowly rose and scraped the mud off. It may be that he was quoting Schiller or Goethe, for his lips moved rapldly. Then he glanced hurriedly about, let the wind out of ais front tire and trundled the wheel to school.
In passing Dr. Davis he remarked, "It is a shame that the clty don't keep the streets free from glass and tacks."
