MASS MEETINGS.

The duty of the educated and cultured to the more unfortunate classes, was the theme of Rev. Graham Taylor in chapel last Thursday morning. The room was filled with students who had come out to hear this great exponent of social settlement work and to assist in choosing the student members of the board of management of the college settlement.

Rev. Taylor said that the leisure of the cultured class is due to the fact that a large body of people are content to do menial labor. It is the duty of every college and university student to pay back what he owes to the laboring class. One of the things that surprises new students when they begin work among the lower classes is that so many of those who have had no opportunity of training the mind are so capable of culture and refinement. There is discontent among the lower classes due to their struggle to come out into sunlight of culture. There is also a desire among many in the upper classes to share the race life. The social settlement work is only the crest of the wave of social consciousness which is sweeping society.

Dr. Taylor covered briefly the history of social settlement work since its inception at Oxford down to the present day. He dwelt at length on the work which is being done in the Chicago Commons, an adjunct of the sociological department of the Chicago Theological Institute and of which he is the head.

It was suggested that the University of Nebraska send one or two students to Chicago to study conditions in the social settlement there.

The meeting was opened by Prof. Caldwell who presented briefly the conditions under which the school year opens.

The election of student members of the board resulted in the choice of Emil Fouquet, W. J. Hunting, Margeret Davis and Edith Abbot.

Chancellor Andrews was introduced and talked briefly on the general features of social settlement work. He directed his attention especially to the influence of Christianity in the solution of social problems.

Prof. Taylor was then introduced and received a warm ovation.

In the evening Rev. Taylor spoke in the First Congregational church.

Last Friday forenoon the students congregated in the chapel to listen to speeches in the interest of foot ball. Prof. Caldwell presided and introduced the following speakers: Roscoe Pound, Paul F. Clark, Coach Booth, Chancellor Andrews, Dr. Hastings and Manager Tukey. The speeches were full of wit and frequently applauded. All urged the students to get out to the games and encourage the players by their presence.
