THE SHIRT TAIL PARADE.

The usual annual shirt tail parade of the university battalion took place yesterday evening. The shirt tailers formed at the armory at nine o'clock and elected Captain Klinge commandant. The parade was formed in two companies and marched down eleventh street followed by a large crowd. There were 160 men in the line when it left the armory. The paraders were dressed in white ducks and night-shirts and each man wore a white handkerchief tied about his head. The celebration was utterly devoid of the objectionable features which characterized that of last year. The men were well behaved and obeyed the commands of their officers. This was in a large measure due to the efforts of Capt. Klinge, who had his men well in hand during the whole of the evening.

A mock dress parade was held at 12th and N streets after which the boys were invited to partake of refreshments at Rector's soda fountain. The paraders appreciated this treatment as was evinced by the many lusty cheers that were given. When their thirst was quenched, the order was given to form in eights. In this manner they proceeded down Eleventh street, zigzagging to the tune of "Hot Time," and were encouraged by the music of the six buglers who led the procession. The paraders then went east on M street and invaded the lobby of the Lindell hotel in lock step. Dean Sherman was then made the recipient of a visit from the ghostly battalion, which formed in double rank around his doorstep. Dr. Sherman was called for and made a speech. He expressed his appreciation of the call and invited the boys to partake of some refreshments, but they declined to impose upon his hospitality. The departed with three cheers for Dean Sherman.

Professor Fling was the next victim. The ghostly warriors camped on the lawn and the professor was called for. He responded immediately. After pleasantly remarking about the grewsome appearance of his visitors, Prof. Fling expressed himself in favor of the amusement, so long as the men behaved in the correct manner. Then after reciting some of his own college experiences, he bade the "toilers" good night. The boys departed with cheers for Prof. Fling.

The white clad battalion then marched down Thirteenth street to O and along O to Ninth. During the march the interest of the onlookers was held by yells, cheers, cake walks, and many other maneuvers. Here lockstep was again formed and the long line entered the Lincoln Hotel lobby. While here a flashlight photograph of the assembly was taken by an artist who was present. While preparing for this the enthusiasm reached its height when a police officer who was present consented to be included in the picture. Three cheers for the police were called for and given with a vim.

After paying the Windsor hotel a visit, the parade returned and Captain Klinge was named as a mark of appreciation. The parade was commanded by Captain Klinge. He made to hold a parade during the

Nothing Can Be Too Neat

Here it's hard work to keep everything spick and span all the time, but that is what we're here for. Our business has kept on growing because we've been particular that every bottle, ever package, every process of compounding or manufacture, should be clean and neat. Bring your prescriptions to us, if you please. Perhaps it is only when it should be clear in appearance. That sometimes happens when a prescription is not put up just right.
