

—As those two large young men were coming through the campus the other morning, at their usual time, one of them picked up an intricate piece of female apparel. Their inventive minds could not discern the secret of its use.

—And now the girls recline on the sidewalk in the shade of those maples, south of the campus, during idle hours of the morning and run foot races toward the University when the bell rings. What next will our Nebraska girls do?

—All half-year subscriptions which we received from the Normal School expire with the present number. We take this opportunity of informing them of the same, and would be pleased to continue their names on our list. Please renew.

—A general solemnity prevails, at the present time, among the students. Seniors look grave, and many others, who are to participate in the society exhibitions, look exceedingly thoughtful and worn with anxiety. The remaining students from pure pity look sad.

—We observe that Yard & Hurlbut have on hand a large stock of goods. The establishment seems to have undergone a transformation lately. New firm, $12,000 worth of new goods, and prices of goods satisfactory. Good suits for $12.00 to $15.00. Give them a call.

—We can't be "bulldozed," to use a common expression, for we have a nice stock of goods in our possession. We bought them, knowing they were the best out, and all we want now is a fair count, AT THE LITTLE GROCERY AROUND THE CORNER of 11th and O.

—COLLEGE FARM.—A literary society has been organized, called the Acadian Society. The following are the officers elect for the present term. Pres., J. H. Silvernail. Sec., J. F. Leamer. The Society meets every Saturday evening, and we understand that the proceedings are quite interesting. We wish the enterprise success.

MARRIED—Wednesday May 16th, at the M. E. Church by the Rev. W. B. Slaughter, Mr. Fred A. Hartley to Miss Flora Alexander, Mr. Will D. Gulick to Miss Ida Alexander. Several of the contracting parties will be recognized as former students of the University. Their friends of the University, extend to them well wishes for their future career.

—Arbor day passed away very quietly this year. The inspiring scene of laborious Professors, noble Seniors, stylish Sophs., and perspiring Freshmen and hard working Preps., decorating the campus with trees, as was seen last year, was not observed this spring. There was no necessity this year for a repetition of the same. We can all look at the work we did last spring and behold the fruits of it—a blooming campus adorned by our hands.

—All students, and others, wishing extra copies of the June number of the STUDENT, will please notify the manager immediately, so that we may be enabled to publish a sufficient number of copies. The June number will contain several productions delivered during commencement week, a record of all the closing proceedings of this term, notice of Regents meeting, and other interesting matters. Every student ought to take extra copies to send to his friends. Quite a number of copies have already been spoken for.

PALLADIAN SOCIABLE—Friday evening May 11th, the Palladian Society held a sociable at their hall. The weather was decidedly unfavorable. It had been raining nearly all day, and the skies looked threatening at night. Nothing was daunted, however, with that active, resolute spirit, so characteristic of the Palladians; quite a number of the students of the University, and a few others assembled and endeavored to make the occasion enjoyable. A good time was had, and had the weather been favorable, they probably would have equaled if not eclipsed previous gather-
