

LOCAL NEWS.

—Good morning.

—Fresh home-made candies made daily at Tomson and Webster, 11th St.

—If you have to send regrets buy some of that regret note paper at Tomson and Webster, 11th St.

—“What are the wild waves saying?” Well, really, we can't call it to mind just now, Oh, yes; now we have it—Let us spray.

—One of the boys from Otoe county has been sold out at sheriff's sale—that is, the sheriff down there has got away with his girl.

—A young Soph received a severe chastisement from his landlady recently, for dampening the ashes in his stove with salt water.

—The first “beautiful snow” of the season made its appearance on the 7th inst. We haven't received any poetry on the subject—nor do we want any.

—“Professor, aren't the Teutons some kin to the Germans,” asked a young lady in the English Literature class, recently. The Prof's reply was not audible in the merriment that followed.

—Nearly all the members of the High School class of '77 are beginning their work where they left off, by taking up the University course. They are good students, and we welcome them heartily.

—That Senior, who asked the company of a lady student to the Palladian Sociable and failed to fulfill his engagement, can either make an apology or suffer the fullest extent of the law—a lawyer's foot.

—Students who have a keen appreciation of the beautiful in art should step around to this office and buy some of those nice chromos we have on hand, and use them in tastefully decorating their rooms.

—Counterfeit $1,000 bills are now in circulation, and we warn students to be careful how they take them in change. We have sent ours on to the treasury department to be examined, and anxiously await the result.

—When the local editor hails you, and crooks his finger into an interrogation point, it means that he wants to see you, and find out whether you “know any thing.” Small items thankfully received, and larger ones in proportion.

—The merchants of Lincoln have extended quite a liberal advertising patronage to the STUDENT. You will always find it an advantage to purchase of men who are willing to invest a fair share of their profits in printer's ink.

—Plato used to remark that above every thing else, he loved to hear the truth. Plato ought to come around to this institution and read some of the excuses made by students who did not wish to join the military drill. We feel certain that he would enjoy himself.

—Election day passed off quietly, and nobody was hurt. “Scratching” was considerably indulged in, and very few “plain unvarnished” tickets were polled. Many students regaled themselves, at the expense of some candidate, with the only cigar they will have during the term.

—New desks have been furnished to several of the professors, and other additions made to their rooms, which are very convenient. So it is that the University is gradually improving in minor points, as well as having some of its more glaring defects substantially remedied.

—The base ball season has closed, and now the muscular youth of our country are no longer in danger of being disfigured for life. Many a brave boy who faced hot “liquers” on the ball field will now content himself with the less dangerous but equally exciting game of seven-up or draw poker.

—Students desiring to become proficient in the art of drawing and painting in all its various departments have now the opportunity. Prof. Frank Stadler is pre-
