

on concluded to see an end to the fight rather than go to their arithmetic class.

—Mrs. Soule's lecture to the students was a very rare treat. The education of woman and the co-education of the sexes were presented in an able manner. She maintains that the education of women is just as essential as that of man, and that the higher education is also necessary to real success in life.

—The members of the Lincoln Rifle-Association met in Lieut. Dudley's room for a permanent organization. A permanent team was organized with the following officers:

Prof. Bailey,	President.
J. H. Harley,	Sen. Vice President.
Lieut. Dudley,	Jun. Vice President.
Mr. Oakley,	Treasurer.
Frank Parks,	Secretary.

—There is to be a literary contest between the University Union and Palladian Society, Friday eve. Feb. 22, in the University chapel. This exhibition will probably be the best entertainment ever given by the students. The performers are the best from each society, and we think almost equal in ability. We bespeak a good audience for this occasion, and insure a pleasant and profitable entertainment for those who come.

—The Palladian Society started this term with a good audience and performances to correspond. Miss Fairfield, the retiring president, addressed the society with a few appropriate remarks, introducing J. H. Worley, the president elect. The stage performances were very good, although not numerous. Messrs Mercer, Hartman, Magoon, and Miss Schuckman discussed the question: "Resolved that a union of the different creeds would tend to the advancement of Christianity." This was one of the most lively debates the Palladians ever had.

—The University is an almost entirely new building, or it seems so from outward appearances. The new lime-stone foundation; the fresh painting and striping of the building give it a very fine appearance on the outside. And not only has it an imposing appearance, but with such a foundation it is substantial. Within, the work of repairing has been extensive; gas-pipes are furnished to all the occupied rooms; and the chapel, with a number of other rooms, have been kalsomined. In a short time the chapel will be furnished with chandeliers.

—We shall soon have to bid farewell to our beloved workmen who have made such lively times for us during the last four months. It has been such a source of joy to us, while in class, to hear a half dozen men hammering on the roof, two or three tearing up the floor in the hall, a number more putting up scaffolds in the chapel, and perhaps another pounding with all his might in the room just above, if you happen to be on the second floor, with an accompaniment of the piano and some melodious voice. This is music too enchanting for our uncultured ear to appreciate.

—For some reason there are only a few students studying military Tactics this term. Perhaps this is because they think that they have not time, but this should not hinder any one from aiding to build up a military department in our University. If the Regents had not thought it would be a benefit to the institution, such a department would never have been instituted, and the expenditures for arms and equipments would not have been made. The requirements in this department are not numerous, and the exercises are pleasant; and every student who takes a part, especially in drilling, will feel better for it.

A NEW EDUCATIONAL JOURNAL.—We learn from the Kearney Press that Hon. L. B. Fifield, one of the Regents of the State University, proposes to issue next month the first number of a bi-weekly journal, devoted to educational and literary matters. Price $1.00 a year. We know of no man better fitted to make such