

LOCAL NEWS.

ARE you going to drill next term?

THE Cadets begin to look cheerful as Spring approaches.

WE wish you all a pleasant time in vacation and hope that you will return next term.

If you don't want any locals put in about you, just keep still when ye local is around.

THE University is more enchanting than ever, since the orchestra has been practicing.

THE Cadets made their first appearance this winter in the Contrabandista at the Opera House.

THE Soph. in Horace class reads: "And now the maidens with toes cut off fierce against the youth."

SOME of the boys have been exercising themselves of late by playing base out in the street east of the University.

SOME of the students will persist in marking the walls. This looks very bad and does not speak well for the students.

MR. BEARDSLEY'S phonography class have been thinking of challenging Prof. Palmer's class for a phonographic contest.

THE Freshman class, on the whole, was said to have written the best essays of any class in the University for the month of February.

THE grass in the campus is beginning to look green, and every thing shows the effect of the pleasant weather we have had lately.

SEVERAL of the students had a short vacation this term. They were set out to rest up a few days until they had written their essays.

THE Union and Palladian societies have been having some enthusiastic discussions this term in the revision of their constitutions.

THE University will probably not turn out so many lawyers after this, since the Union society has decided that they are a curse to the country.

SOME of the students of phonography have already begun to make use of what they have learned by taking notes in class and writing to the girls.

PROF. PALMER'S phonography class in the University is well attended and all the members are much pleased with the progress they are making.

YE local will have to be careful what he writes after this, as the Palladian Society has decided that the liberty of the press should be restricted.

If you have seen any students with black eyes or swollen lips don't think they have forgotten their pledge—it's only the effects of the boxing-gloves.

SOME one unknown has been trying to start a flirtation with the Editor-in-chief by sending an unstamped drop letter (two cents due) containing a sheet of blank paper.

A PROF., when he had called his class to order, said that he would like to get through with the lesson in a hurry, because he expected the sheriff after him every minute.

WE suggest to that Freshman who asked the company of his girl for society while passing along the street, that he had better seek a more private place or else not talk so loud. The houses on R st have ears.

ONE of our Preps who is of the long slim pattern, thinks of joining a circus, since he performed so gracefully in the philosophy class when they were receiving a shock of electricity from the battery.

LITERARY AND EDUCATIONAL NOTES, published by L. B. Fifield, Kearney, Nebraska, ought to be in the hands of every teacher in the State. Specimen copies may be seen and subscription taken at this office.
