

that his preference is for the teacher's profession.

MOLLIE A. CARTER,

a resident of Lincoln, entered the University in the Fall term of 1871, having previously attended the High School of this city. Miss Carter and Mr. Rhodes are the last "charter members" of our school. She is eighteen years of age, of less than usual size, light-haired and blue-eyed. Quiet and unassuming in appearance, she has attended well to her studies, of which the languages seem the ones in which she is most proficient. She entered in the first preparatory year, and graduates in the scientific course. For a year or more past Miss Carter has been a member of the University Union.

EDWARD P. HOLMES

of Nebraska City, entered the first preparatory year of our school in the second term of the first year. He is the first graduate in the literary course. Ed. is nineteen years of age, of rather less than average height, is sparely built, brown haired and grey eyed. He has been an active member of the Palladian society having twice filled the office of President. In the welfare of THE STUDENT he has also taken an exemplary interest, and has in succession been local, and editor-in-chief. He will be greatly missed, especially in the society of which he has so long been a member. Respecting the career he intends to follow we are not fully informed, but would infer that his preference is for the law. We bespeak for him a promising career.

ALFRED C. PLATT

entered the Sophomore class of the classical course in the winter term of '76. He is now a resident of Lincoln, but had previously attended the Iowa University. Mr. Platt is twenty-three years old, of about average height, rather spare, and has black eyes and black, curly hair. He is of an active, lively nature, and wherever found, has been a leader in the enterprises of the students. He has been a prominent member of the University Union and president of the HESPERIAN STUDENT Association. He has been a diligent and thorough student. His chosen profession, we understand, is that of the law.

WELLINGTON P. RHODES

entered the University at its opening in the Fall term of '71. He graduates in the classical course which he began in the first preparatory year. He has been a careful student, as well as an active and faithful member of the University Union. Mr. Rhodes is twenty-one years of age, of about average height and size, and has dark hair and eyes. He is social and unassuming in manner and wins the respect and esteem of all who know him. We are informed that he intends to teach for a time, after which he will study for the ministry. We anticipate from his past record a useful career in the calling he has chosen.

FLORENCE L. VAUGHAN, of Falls City, entered the Sophomore class of the scientific course in the Fall of '75 and has pursued her studies uninterruptedly since that time. In stature, she is below the average, and is light-complexioned, light-haired, and blue-eyed. Rather quiet and retiring in manner, she has not taken an active part in society work, though of late an honorary member of the University Union. In her studies she has held an enviable rank. With a high degree of excellence in the sciences, she has also developed an aptitude for literary studies.

HENRY H. WILSON, of Ashland, began his attendance at the University in its second year. He is of average height and heavily built, with a full face and rather a florid complexion. He completes the Latin Scientific course, and by his own efforts has made his way through college. This has necessitated his absence from school for several terms. Mr. Wilson has been a leading member of the University Union, and has served with great credit as editor-in-chief of the STUDENT. It is his intention, we believe, to follow teaching for a time, and then to
