Unangst, Rich, and Silvermail. Music will be interspersed.

the woods." Pretty soon he saw a light and went towards it. It was at a house and he knocked timidly at the door. "Wh 's there?" exclaimed a rough voice. "It's me," sobbed our alumnus, forgetting his grammar. "You're a tramp, clear out!" commanded the voice. "But I'm from the University, and I'm lost" he retorted. Thinking that a University student was harmless he was allowed to go in and pass the night. The next day he was observed trying to buy an old saw-mill. He said the electric machine at the University was very small and he wanted to send it a larger one

An Alumnus Abroad.

To see a little chick deprived of the shelter of its mother's wings is a pitiful sight. But the most heartrending spectacle we ever witnessed was a new acquisition to the Alumni when he departed from the nurturing breast of his Alma Mater. One of our late graduates has already felt the clammy fingers of the cold, cold world. He had gone to see his girl. Of course he stayed late. When he started away a thunder storm was rising. His girl asked him if he was afraid of lightning. He replied with a condescending smile that many times he had seen the professor get the electric current by means of an intricate machine and did she think that he was one likely to get frightened at such lightening as could be furnished in the country? She gasped that she did not think he would and he departed. But the flashes that night were much more frightful than any he had ever seen before and pretty soon he became frightened and began to cry. He thought of the fate of the "Babes of
