

Campus Canards,

Sam Cox, '80, of the Central City Courier was in town Saturday.

Let us make 1882-3 the banner year in the history of the University.

Student in history; "Professor, who massacred St. Bartholomew?"

Mr. Ralph O. Weston, '82, is in the city, having returned from Denver.

"Doc" Paine was a pleasant caller at the STUDENT office Monday evening.

Prof. in French: "Monsieur, etes vous assis?" Student (promptly) "No sir."

The classical students are learning a Barberous method of pronouncing Latin.

"Are you taking Calculus?" Yes—well I'm just an honorary member of that class."

Physics: "Explain impenetrability of matter." "Two joints of stove pipe for instance." McMillan

There are 19 boys at the college farm this year. Most of them are taking the regular Agricultural course.

An improbos Senior threw tesserars for cigars. He was badly victus and must vender his libros to pay the pignus which makes him feel very Tristis.

The Band is entering upon a new era of prosperity, and will doubtless manifest that high standard of excellence that has characterized it in the past.

Gunning is a favorite diversion of the tutors this term; two of them were out as far as Crabbe's mill Saturday afternoon—result of expedition two sparrows!

The Palladian society has very kindly offered the College Y. M. C. A. the use of its old chandelier which will be placed immediately in No. 5. Many thanks.

The Tonic Sol Fa system is having a general boom. Prof. Draper announced to his class that there are already 100 teachers in this country with 50,000 pupils.

Yates, who represented the Palladians society so ably in the Crete contest last year, is to be married soon, so say the young ladies, all of 'em; "that's what they sigh."

An historical sketch of the Y. M. C. A. is received at this office together with a paper on its influence in colleges by a member of Bowdoin, read at the last annual convention.

The remark is current that a greater number of students attend chapel than ever before. So far as the observation of "Ye auxiliary" goes this may also be said with reference to members of the Faculty.

Prof. Nicholson deserves credit for the untiring labor which he has expended in cleaning and repairing the apparatus in the laboratory, since August 1st. Since Prof. Collier's time this department has had no regular representative for any considerable length of time; consequently the machinery has suffered much.

Rev. James Worley and his estimable lady departed for the North China Mission Field last July.

Mr. and Mrs. Worley are sent under the auspices of the M. E. people, and expect to remain away several years. The STUDENT joins the many other friends of Mr. and Mrs. Worley in wishing them God-speed.

The trees planted so carefully by different classes on Arbor Day are all growing nicely and give proof of having received proper attention from the gardener during the hot summer months.

The following members of the Union have been chosen to compete with the Palladians at the appointed time: Orator, G. W. Botsford; Essayist, Flora Frost; Debater, Jesse Homes; Declaimer, Bertha Childs.

Lucy Stone wept as she looked about her in the old Representative Hall, where the Equal Rights Act now pending originated. Was it sentiment or was it a piece of falling lime that caused the emotion?

The acoustic properties of the chapel are wretched, else why are the boys in the rear of the room half a stanza behind the leader in singing? We don't get the sound of his voice soon enough. No lack of talent on our part.

A candidate for admission, when asked at what time the Protestant Reformation began, replied: "I think it was about five or six hundred years before Christ; was it not?" There is still a broad field open to her, for historic research.

When the Unions have a social, they import dead heads from the recitation rooms. The Palladians have a supply on hand constantly. No importation is, therefore, necessary.—Union on Palladian Champions of the Turf: i. e. Poney Riders.

Now that the old Dormitory no longer dispenses peppery hash and oniony potatoes many of our boys are taking up the old practice of scraping their own kettles. They are following in the footsteps of some of the best students that ever graduated from this institution and of some who are at present teaching here.

MARRIED: Hartman—Sprague.

At Gibbon, Neb., August 15; Mr. George Hartman and Miss Flora Sprague. The STUDENT sends happy greetings. Mr. Hartman is an old student of the University, now tutor in the Gibbon Seminary.

The Palladian society challenged the Unionists to a literary combat two weeks ago. The invitation was accepted with alacrity and Dec. 15 agreed upon as the time for holding the contest. The trial will be in oratory, essay writing, declamation and debate.

Letters from Silvernail and Unangst ('80) say that the "natives" of Utah have little effort in adapting themselves either to the mode of living or habits of University graduates. The "Latter Day" folks and Indians are not so bad after all else they could never amalgamate with such material.

The Palladians have purchased a new $100 chandelier, 12 lights and handsome, which will be here early in the term. Members of this society have long been oppressed the lack of correspondence between the old chandelier and the beautiful ornamentations of their hall—hence the change.

The most practical method of studying that branch of biology which relates to the Jelly fish is, according to the highest authority of this institution, to take a moonlight walk on the shores of New Jersey, when you may tread upon them unawares (both to yourself and to the unfortunate Jelly fish.) This animal will experience a sensation of weight, and you of unsteadiness in your understandings accompanied by a feeling of relief that no one see you fall and that you can get home in the dark unseen.
