

equally bad, one must strive to reach the happy mean. Fully a third of our college course may be lost by too much study. This seems paradoxical but it is true. A more general interest in University affairs is what we need. Any one who can devise a feasible scheme to bring this result about will have filled a long-felt want.

The editors of the Annual have become personally responsible for its financial success. The Driter is one of the colossal intellects that help bear the loss, if any. Therefore he takes advantage of having free face to give the Annual an ad. Subscribe for the Annual, advertise in the Annual, support the Annual. Don't forget it!

Campus Canards.

Chancellor has gone East again.

Miss Belle Ballard has taken a school near Raymond.

There will be two more issues of the STUDENT this college year.

Happy Seniors. No classes, no cares, no nothing! A whole month of blissful idleness! You are the most fortunate of mortals.

And now Cheney is to be disgraced. He has taken an agency for a picture house and will canvass in Richardson county during the vacation.

Wanted,—A guardian for the gymnasium. In its present decrepit state it is feared that our old and tried friend will wander away and become hopelessly lost.

The police force has been ordered to appear in uniform when on duty and to conform to a number of red tape rules. It will be hard on our ubiquitous cops.

It is a fact that the University of Nebraska possesses two of the most elegant society halls in the United States. Why is this the case? Answer can be had at this office.

The foundation walls of the new capitol are completed up to the water table. The massive walls of the dome have gone as high as the second story in their journey to the skies.

The U. N. B. B. nine will play a game with the Firth club on the 1st of June. This club grows in a country village, but we wish to warn the boys that it will take excellent laying to defeat them.

Cuts and flunks seem to be most prominent features of the University work just now. Commencement work is focusing and the weather does all in its power to cause laziness and general discontentedness.

The Kappa Kappa Gamma Fraternity which has been expected in this institution for so these many months has up to this writing failed to materialize. Have the girls been denied a charter?

LATER—Since the above was written the girls have been initiated. Further particulars will be given in our next issue.

Commencement promises to be well attended this year.

Miss Alice Carse formerly '85, made the University a call last week.

Miss Talbot has gone to her home at Syracuse to spend a few days.

Messrs. Frank Myers and Ed Austin formerly '86, made us a call last week.

The college orchestra assists the song portion of the Y. M. C. A. on Sunday afternoons.

A second nine has been organized, and will soon challenge the first to mortal combat.

Miss Genia Stillman was suddenly called to her home in Louisiana, Missouri, last week.

A. L. Frost, '85, a veteran of two months experience in the commercial world, has returned to continue his studies.

The Cadets indulge in a dress-parade every Friday afternoon. These exhibitions of masculine symmetry are not so well attended as of yore, however.

The base ballists have laid out new grounds several blocks north of the campus. They are extensive enough for the hardest batter in the University nine.

The prep who, in a fit of mental aberration, carried off chapel bible and left in its place a much worn Dictionary can learn something to his interest by calling at Room Number Five.

The Sophomores are considering the feasibility of taking up a collection to buy a pot of paint for the faded exterior of our building. Their experience in "painting the town red" eminently qualifies them for the laudable undertaking.

The catalogue is now in the hands of the printer. It will appear in a form closely resembling that of the Yale catalogue, and will contain many new features. The middle names of all the students who possess such an useless appendage will be given in full.

The commencement programme so far as announced is as follows; Friday evening, Palladian Exhibition; Saturday evening, Union exhibition; Sunday evening, Baccalaureate address; Tuesday evening University address; Wednesday, Commencement; Wednesday evening, reception.

At last we are to have grass around the building. The work has been commenced or we would not dare to make this rash statement. Guards of brick have been built around the basement windows, and the ground will be filled so as to form a slope from the top of these to the driveways. Now "Keep off the grass," and in a short time this barren place will become as verdant as an agricultural student.

It is broadly hinted that on the morning after the circus day the janitor found a donkey in a recitation room on the third floor. He quietly removed his royal highness and dug a pit long and deep for the perpetrators of the deed by not saying anything about the matter. He hoped to detect the guilty parties by observing who first broached the subject of donkeys, but the scheme was a miserable failure. The truth leaked out without implicating any body, and at this date the Faculty and the janitor are hurting for the wretches with dark lanterns and clubs.
