EDITORIAL NOTES.

It is too soon to state what has been done for the University by the legislature. But let the friends of the University remember hereafter, that in order to make its welfare secure, they must ever be vigilant.

"Warm love will turn to bitter hate." Once upon a time a certain man advertised himself as the friend of higher education in Nebraska. Notice the action and course of that individual in the capitol, and does not the old adage apply to him?

THE local contest will probably take place in the chapel, Monday evening April 1st. It would be wise to charge a nominal fee for admission—say ten cents. The receipts would cover all expense incurred by the University in the state association. It would save the treasurer an infinite amount of work and the students much annoyance.

A meeting of the local association will be called to decide the matter.

THE proposition to substitute two joint exhibitions for the four annual exhibitions of the literary societies should receive more attention. When only two such societies were in existence their annual exhibitions formed attractive features of commencement exercises. When each of the four societies proposes to have an annual exhibition, it is too much. Of course mutual sacrifices must be made on the part of the societies. But there are other considerations to be taken into account than the claims of the societies. The students should consider the matter of joint programs candidly. There are two sides to the question at least.

THE members of the senior class are doubtless beginning to wonder what occupation they will enter after graduation. A hasty examination of the list of alumni reveals some interesting statistics.

Including every class that has graduated except '88 the list is composed of about eighty members. Of these thirty-five percent are engaged in the practice of law. Twenty-three percent are engaged in teaching either as fullfledged professors or principals of high schools. Five percent are engaged in the practice of medicine. Eight percent are engaged in newspaper work. Five percent are ministers. Five percent are engaged in industrial pursuits, five percent
