

Storrs leads the van. He appeared on March 6 with a seersucker. Langworthy was greatly disappointed on getting out the next morning and realizing that his nobby flannel would have to wait for the next rise of temperature to make its debut.

The University Union officers for the spring term are: Miss Jennie Bonnell, president; D. N. Lehmer, vice-president; F. F. Almy, secretary; Miss Edna Hyatt, assistant secretary; H. C. Peterson, critic; L. E. Troyer and James Barkley, sergeants-at-arms.

Dr. L. D. Bailor roamed about these halls a few hours one day last week, almost unrecognized and unknown. Old students should either remove their beards or else introduce themselves when they come around. Dr. Bailor now enjoys a very lucrative practice at Geneva.

Evidently the students, who armed themselves with a copy of Macbeth and filled the gallery of the opera house last Saturday evening were mistaken in the supposed ability of Januschek. The ex-queen-of-the-tub and her corpulent assistant would appear better in "The Two Johns."

The Delian Society will be officered as follows the spring term: president, Miss Myra Clark; vice-president, C. D. Schell, recording secretary, Miss Nellie Cochran; corresponding secretary, F. A. Rockhold; Mus. secretary, Miss Flora Hull; critic, E. R. Holmes; sergeant-at-arms, D. D. Forsyth.

Mr. A. G. Warner, Ph.D., will enter upon his duties as a professor of political and economic science at the University of Nebraska soon after January 1st next.—University Quarterly.

Above is rather late in reaching us but we want to show that even folks in New York have heard of "our Warner."

A wandering phonograph—or possibly, phunny-graph—man struck this institution last Thursday and gave an exhibition of his machine. It gave a very clear and distinct reproduction of the sounds, but when it suddenly and unexpectedly ejaculated, "It's all right," it looked as if it had struck an extra cog.

The officers of the Palladian society for the spring term are as follows: president, Miss Helen Aughey; vice president, Miss Goodell; corresponding secretary, Miss DePue; recording secretary, J. W. McCrosky; music secretary, Miss Gund; critic, G. H. Tinker; historian, F. D. Hyde; sergeant-at-arms, E. M. Pollard.

Captain H. J. Webber went down to Peru Friday, it is reported, for the purpose of drilling the cadets at the state normal school. We are glad to learn that we can be of service to the normal boys, who are not so well provided for in a military way as we are. The drill at the normal school is a voluntary organization, while here it is compulsory.

The botanists received a specimen that is a rare treat to Nebraska students, from Professor Caldwell, in the form of a banana bud from Southern California. They will use some of the flowers from near the base for study and then the large bud will then be dried and kept as a curiosity. Every student should see it while it is fresh, if they have any interest in such things.

A delegation of about seventy-five students of the Swedish Lutheran academy, of Wahoo, in charge of Professor Hill, visited the legislature and the various other points of interest in the city. They spent several hours in looking through the University, the museum, the society halls, the several laboratories and the armory. There were a number of bright looking young people among them and they seemed to take a lively interest in matters.

The prevailing opinion among the students at present is that they have been duped in the late action of the faculty regarding final examinations. They have not only extended the length of the term, thereby depriving many of the students of the opportunity of going home, but have also been so very discreet in their resolution as to allow professors, who so wish, to give final examinations. Now we do not object to finals but if we must take them and do ourselves justice they must have some preparation, and why not keep the old plan or do away with them entirely? And, as we understand it, the extra time of this term will not effect any change whatever upon the the length of the spring term, therein not fulfilling the alleged reasons for the change. What can be the object of this double-headed resolution further than overtaxing the students is more than we are able to understand. It is certainly an unfair deal to carry our regular recitations, which are unquestionably enough to fully occupy our time and have a few final examinations sandwiched in for flavoring. This resolution may have appeared to the faculty to be proper but to us it certainly seems to be a gross injustice.

There are just about fifty of you that will borrow somebody's paper and read this. You probably never thought of it just in this way before, but when you think a moment, isn't it a little mean and stingy to make your friend pay for your paper? He is doing his duty by the University and the paper which represents it. You are not. It takes money, and a good deal of money, to run THE HESPERIAN. Every loyal student should help to support the paper. At least you that read the paper have no excuse for sneaking out of it. For the remainder of the year THE HESPERIAN costs 50 cents. Won't you be square and pay up?
