

Be Most Wonderful Medical Discovery of the Age—Every Man his own Physician.

Frazier's Great Remedy

The people of the United States have been humbugged with all kinds of Patent Medicines...

It is not for me to say the praise was merited, but I certainly found myself able to discover loop-holes of escape for those who I detested...

However, I began to tell you about Mme. Matteau. She was an old lady who owned a little house in the suburbs of the city...

There had been two sudden deaths in the neighborhood. Each time the victim was a stranger who came at night and was found dead in his bed in the morning...

It was a terrible thing that two such deaths should have occurred beneath her roof. Madame's friends pitied her. The rest of the little world hinted that these were both strangers...

Myself—perhaps because I had advised her a great deal, and her daughter much more—had always insisted that it was merely a coincidence...

Before I had recovered from the shock of this terrible piece of news, a message came to me from Mme. Matteau, who desired to see me, and of course I went at once.

She had called on me in person, and I found her in a small room, with a barred window, and an insufficient fire upon the hearth.

"Oh, thank heaven you have come!" she said; "I know you can save me. Is it not true, Mr. Frazier, that I shall die?"

"I can do nothing for you," I said, "but I can tell you what you should do. You must get out of this house as soon as you can."

"But I cannot leave my daughter," she said. "I have no one else to turn to. I have no money. I have no friends."

"I will try to do what I can for you," I said. "I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can. I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can."

"I will try to do what I can for you," I said. "I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can. I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can."

"I will try to do what I can for you," I said. "I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can. I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can."

"I will try to do what I can for you," I said. "I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can. I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can."

"I will try to do what I can for you," I said. "I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can. I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can."

"I will try to do what I can for you," I said. "I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can. I will try to get you out of this house as soon as I can."

AN OLD LAWYER'S STORY.

A great many years ago, while I was employed by a young man, and still unmarried, I resided in a certain city of Pennsylvania, and enjoyed the reputation of being the cleverest lawyer ever known there.

It is not for me to say the praise was merited, but I certainly found myself able to discover loop-holes of escape for those who I detested...

However, I began to tell you about Mme. Matteau. She was an old lady who owned a little house in the suburbs of the city...

There had been two sudden deaths in the neighborhood. Each time the victim was a stranger who came at night and was found dead in his bed in the morning...

It was a terrible thing that two such deaths should have occurred beneath her roof. Madame's friends pitied her. The rest of the little world hinted that these were both strangers...

Myself—perhaps because I had advised her a great deal, and her daughter much more—had always insisted that it was merely a coincidence...

Before I had recovered from the shock of this terrible piece of news, a message came to me from Mme. Matteau, who desired to see me, and of course I went at once.

She had called on me in person, and I found her in a small room, with a barred window, and an insufficient fire upon the hearth.

Money and Commerce.

There is nothing new whatever in financial circles. Deposits are good; checking is fair, but heavy balances are in favor of the banks.

There are in demand to a certain extent, and are readily accommodated at 12 1/2 per cent when paper is reliable.
